Price Break Won't Alter CIO's Wage Hike Plans

Steel Negotiations Start in April; Some Quotations Already Advanced

By The Associated Press

The CIO is going ahead with its new wage demands.

The food price break did not change its plans, CIO President Philip Murray said yesterday. He sees no reason for it to continue, he said.

It was a flat "no" to the question: Have sliding markets softened the CIO campaign for a new round of wage boosts?

Said Murray in a statement:

"Nothing that has occurred in the past few weeks alters the CIO's determination" to seek substantial wage increases and work for anti-inflation legislation.

Talks Start in April

Wage talks in the vital steel industry start in April. Economists anxiously await the effect. Already some steel prices have gone up $5 or more a ton ahead of the wage meetings.

Is this price increase just a starter? The magazine Steel today forecast that it is. It expects a general steel price rise in anticipation of a wage hike.

However, leading steel men said last week that the new steel quotations are only to meet present costs. Future wage demands have nothing to do with it, they said.

Congress quickly called steel leaders to explain. Some said the Justice Department ought to be busy on it too. The Department was silent.

Said Representative Keating (R., N. Y.), member of the House Judiciary Committee which handles antitrust inquiries for Congress:

"It is extremely curious to say the least that the boards of directors of the various companies should decide entirely independently to raise their prices at the same time by approximately the same amount."

Three unidentified steel executives are to testify Thursday about the new price boost before the Joint Congressional Economic Committee headed by Senator Taft (R., Ohio). Taft said it would be a "preliminary" hearing.

Full Investigation Sought

But Senators O'Mahoney (R., Wyo.) and Flanders (R., Vt.) told a reporter they want a "full dress" investigation.

"It may be that the antitrust laws are violated," O'Mahoney said. "I don't know about that but I do know that in any event the public interest is impaired."

Many Congressmen say they fear that the steel price increase may mark another widespread rise in most prices as the cost is passed along.

Meanwhile, the National Federation of Small Business announced it has protested, to the Commerce Department, steel shipments to foreign countries "while small businesses in the United States . . . are severely handicapped by inability to obtain steel."

Army Preparing Effort to Map Moon by Radar

By the United Press

Army Signal Corps scientists are getting ready to explore the surface of the moon with radar in an attempt to map its mountains, valleys and craters.

They will use electronics improvements which have been developed since January 10, 1946, the day the Signal Corps electrified the Nation by announcing it had made radar contact with the moon. On that day a signal was beamed 238,857 miles to the celestial body and it bounced back within 2.4 seconds to be received by scientists at the Evans Signal Laboratory, Belmar, N. J.

Signal Corps scientists say they have greatly improved the sensitivity of the receiving set which will be used in the new experiments at the Evans Laboratory next month. They also have stepped up the power of the radar transmitter to send a stronger signal.

U. S. War Crimes Judge Flayed For Criticizing Nazis' Trial

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 22 (AP).—Under unusual circumstances, the chief United States prosecutor of war crimes in Germany came out today with a blast at the American judge who presided over the trial of German generals which ended Thursday.

The prosecutor, Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor, attacked Charles F. Wennerstrum, a justice of the Iowa supreme court who tonight was flying to the United States, and unavailable for comment.

Taylor said Judge Wennerstrum had given The Chicago Tribune an interview which is "subversive of the interests and policies of the United States." Taylor said the interview "will be used by all the worst elements in Germany against the best."

How Taylor could get a copy of the interview before it was published tonight in Chicago was not explained by the United States Army's public relations division, which made public the Taylor statement.

E. C. Deane, public information officer at Nuernberg, said he read Foust's story Saturday night, 24 hours after it was filed but had learned of its contents before he read it, through somebody who "had been and overheard a conversation" between Wennerstrum and Foust.

He added he had talked with Foust Friday night to try "to talk him out of sending the story" and that Foust replied it already had been filed.

Czech Labor Leaders Back Red Premier

Gottwald's Demands Following Familiar Party Purge Line

Prague, Feb. 22 (AP).—Labor leaders threw their support today behind the campaign by Communist Premier Klement Gottwald to drive his anti-Communist foes out of the Czechoslovak government.

Delegates to the Czechoslovak Trade Union told the Premier they would call a one-hour nation-wide strike Tuesday in support of his demands.

Gottwald demanded for the fourth time in three days that President Eduard Benes accept the resignations of 12 anti-Communist ministers.

The ministers resigned in protest against promotions of Communists to high posts in the security police. Gottwald sought authority from Benes to replace the ministers with pro-Soviet Communist sympathizers.

Benes Refuses Demands

Benes has refused Gottwald's demands and has kept the government from falling apart.

Gottwald in a speech before the union delegates which was broadcast to the country, employed more and more the type of slogan that preceded purging of Communist opponents from other European governments.

Cheers greeted his cry:

"Long live the government of the national front of the working people!"

He charged the opposition with being anti-Soviet.

"Domestic and foreign reaction have been trying to change both our domestic and foreign policy," he shouted.

"To gain and keep the help of foreign reaction these defrauders of the people (the dissenting ministers) were ready to break off our bonds of alliance with the Soviet Union and the Slav nations, to tolerate the rebirth of German imperialism and to participate in the name of their own class interests even in a new Munich."

Antonin Zapotocky, head of the trades union and a Communist deputy, responded with the order for the token strike. Cries of "Zapotocky to power" and "Zapotocky led us in our work, he will lead us in our fight," greeted the action.

Benes will confer here tomorrow with leaders and ministers of the Slovak Democratic Party, the dominant party in semiautonomous Slovakia. They formed one group which refused to continue in the government in protest of Communists in the security police.

Lucas Accused Of 'New Deal' Aid Tactics

Ball and Knowland Deny Revisionists Jeopardize Policy

By the United Press

A brace of Senate Republicans and a leading Democrat were at each other's throats yesterday over charges that GOP "revisionists" are jeopardizing bipartisan United States foreign policy by trying to undermine the European Recovery Plan.

The charges were voiced by Democratic Whip Scott Lucas of Illinois. He said the revisionists, who would like to see the ERP modified, were plotting in "furtive" meetings to sink the aid plan and were acting in parallel with Russian leaders.

But Senators William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) and Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.), both revisionists, snapped back that Lucas was injecting "New Deal tactics" into foreign policy debate and trying to reduce Congress to "rubber-stamp" status.

Sees Constant Sniping

Lucas told a Democratic political gathering at Springfield, Ill., last night that "an ambitious group. . . . A little coterie of Republican Senators" sought by "constant sniping" to embarrass the Administration in its dealings abroad.

"This group is preparing to offer a series of emasculating amendments hoping to kill or seriously impair the plan. . . . With interminable debate upon a morass of arithmetic and technical details. . . . A remarkable parallel (with)

600 Cats Meowing All ver Town When Sale Flops

Falls City, Nebr., Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Cats were running loose all over Falls City today. An estimated 600 of them.

Last week a serum company advertised for live cats at 50-cents apiece. A buyer would be at an auction company barn Saturday noon to collect the cats, the ad said

Residents of the city and county began rounding up cats. Meanwhile, cat lovers formed a "citizens' committee" and wired the company to "by-pass Falls City. No cats available here."

The serum company decided to skip Falls City, but the cat collectors weren't notified. When the buyer failed to appear the auction company called off the sale. The cat sellers dropped their cats and left.

Green Breaks Precedent

Labor Chiefs Join ADA Fight On Wallace and All 'Reaction'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22.—The bulk of organized labor joined hands with Americans for Democratic Action today in a political program against the third party and against "reaction" in the two major parties.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, appeared for the first time in his career before a political organization's convention, in addressing the ADA's annual meeting.

He told the anti-Communist progressives that he spoke not as "a pleader from another camp, but as a working partner." He said no union leader could "deliver" its members into any political camp, but that ADA's aims would meet with "an overwhelming and enthusiastic response" from all workers.

CIO, represented for the first time officially in the ADA—reflecting an antileft decision by its top leadership—seemed also to stand for the same program.

With half a dozen CIO international union presidents in attendance, President Walter Reuther of the CIO-United Auto Workers called for a joint liberal-labor political campaign on the slogan "Forward From Where the New Deal Left Off."

Both speakers blasted the third party candidacy of Henry Wallace. Green called it "ill-starred" and "red-starred." Reuther said the ADA and progressives in general "have the job of taking on Joe Stalin" by offering "a positive, creative, dynamic alternative program."

But they, just as ADA itself, were up against the basic problem that seemed to have no solution: the Democratic Party is the only vehicle through which liberals

Stay Ready For Attack, Russia Told

Defense Minister Warns on Air of Continuing Peril From Imperialism

Soviet Attack Resented

'Constant Preparedness'

London, Feb. 22 (AP).—Russian Defense Minister N. A. Bulganin declared tonight the world situation compels the Soviet Union to live "in constant fighting preparedness," the Moscow radio said.

In a broadcast order of the day heard in London, Bulganin warned Russia that "so long as imperialism exists there remains a danger of attack on our country."

His message marked tomorrow's thirtieth anniversary of the Soviet army and navy's founding.

Danger of Attack

Bulganin said:

"Successfully realizing the great program of building up a Communist society, we should not forget that while imperialism exists there remains danger of attack on our country."

"The situation in which we are living compels us to be in constant fighting preparedness.

"In the postwar period, our armed forces have made serious progress in the further perfection of their military and political knowledge.

"This, however, should not give birth to tranquillity, complacency or conceit in our ranks."

Bulganin said the Soviet peoples have approached the anniversary "in conditions of successful struggle for fulfillment of the postwar Stalin five-year plan in four years."

Fighting for Peace

He added that "by deeds" the people have expressed approval of the Bolshevik party and the Soviet government.

"The Soviet Union," he said, "is firmly pursuing its peace-loving foreign policy, marching in the vanguard of the progressive forces fighting for a firm and enduring democratic peace, for the security of nations."

Then he added:

"This just Stalin foreign policy is supported by the countries of the peoples democracy, by the friends of peace and freedom the world over. Our armed forces stand guard over this policy."

The broadcast quoted Bulganin as saying:

"The might of the Sovie army and navy was displayed most fully and vividly in the years of the great patriotic war against Germany and her allies.

Nazi, Jap Victories

"In a bitter, single-handed fight, the Soviet armed forces routed the German Fascist army and crushed Hitler Germany.

"A similar fate befell imperialist Japan.

"The Soviet army and navy won because in their struggle against the enemies they leaned for support upon the mighty forces of the Soviet socialist state and of our people."

Bulganin ordered 30 artillery salvoes fired tomorrow in Moscow and other Soviet cities, the broadcast said.

The broadcast quoted Bulganin as saying:

"In the stern years of foreign military intervention and civil war our army smashed the united forces of international and internal counterrevolution and insured the Soviet people the possibility of creating a peaceful construction of socialism.

2 Hotels Wrecked

Jerusalem, Feb. 22 (AP).—Two truckloads of explosives shattered the heart of the Jewish business district in Jerusalem today and hospital reports put the number of dead at 43.

A previous British announcement said 35 were killed and at least 88 injured. (The United Press said 42 Jews, 11 Britons and 4 Arabs were killed and 113 persons injured in the bombing.)

The Arabs said their Syrian-trained commandos planted the explosives. Reprisal fighting followed and by nightfall nine British soldiers had been killed and eight wounded and one Jew killed and 12 others wounded.

The blast ripped apart two small hotels, three apartment buildings and scores of shops for two blocks along Ben Yehuda st. Walls buckled and window frames were torn out for another two blocks.

No official estimate of damage was available.

Windows were broken in the United States consulate a half-mile distant.

Feeling among the Jews ran bitter that the British were in some way responsible for the worst bombing in the warfare that has grown out of the United Nations decision to partition Palestine.

Fighting flared repeatedly at sandbagged gunposts guarding the British security zone.

Five British soldiers were killed and six injured when an electrically detonated mine shattered their army truck. Another was shot to death and another wounded, police said, when a man believed to be Jewish entered a hospital and fired at them. The soldiers had been injured in a separate road-mine blast.

Two RAF regiment troopers were killed by gunfire near the gate of the British security zone. A chaplain was wounded and his army driver killed by gunfire near the Jewish Agency building.

Virgin Islands Hail Truman As '48 Winner

Buttons, Banner Boom Candidacy as Negro Crowds Cheer

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

St. Thomas, Feb. 22.—President Truman sailed across the Spanish Main to the Virgin Islands today, and found himself a hero among the nearly all-Negro population. He also heard himself boomed for a full four-year term in 1948.

The Chief Executive would have been given a hearty welcome under almost any circumstances, since American rule has been popular here these last 31½ years.

However, Mr. Truman's 10-point civil rights program, aimed at Jim Crowism at home, which infuriated so many Southern Democrats, gave him a special place in the islanders' affections. This was reflected in their unrestrained cheers, and in a banner stretched across St. Thomas' main street on this Sabbath day:

"Welcome, President Truman. "Champion of Human Rights."

Gov. William H. Hastie, formerly dean of the Howard University Law School in Washington and the first Negro governor in the history of the islands, greeted Mr. Truman as he came down the gangplank of the presidential yacht Williamsburg.

Wears Truman Button

Hastie, a Truman appointee, was wearing a lapel button with these words, "Forward with President Truman—No Retreat." This seemed to be the slogan of the day, for it appeared on many more but-

As Governors Meet

GOP Pushes Anti-Lynch Law Plans

By The Associated Press

Republican lawmakers pushed antilynching law plans yesterday as five aroused Southern Governors descended on Washington.

The Governors announced last night, after a two-hour meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, that they had reached agreement on the "presentation" they would make today to Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath. Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina said they were in "a fighting mood."

The Southern Democrats, Thurmond said, "really mean business" in their demand that President Truman relax his civil rights program. He said the Governors intended to get "party peace or else."

Electoral Support Threatened

Apparently that meant they would carry out their threat to withhold their electors in the 1948 presidential election unless the President comes at least part way to meet them. Withholding their electoral votes would throw the election into the House of Rerpresentatives.

Thurmond would not say what "presentation" had been agreed upon.

In the House, Representative Clifford Case (R., N. J.) set hearings to begin Wednesday before a House Judiciary Subcommittee on his own bill to bring lynchings under Federal law. He heads the subcommittee.

On the other side of the Capitol, Chairman Ferguson (R., Mich.) said he expects his judiciary subcommittee to complete drafting the Senate antilynching version before the end of the week.

Snow Removal Job in District Aided by Sun

20-Degree Temperature Predicted Today Rising to Near 40,

A warming sun yesterday helped take some of the sting out of Washington's new snowfall, officially measured at 4.2 inches.

It was a slushy snow and did not pack on the streets and highways, but the weatherman warned that below freezing temperatures last night would probably glaze the roadways and make travel precarious.

His forecast for early this morning was partly cloudy with temperature in the lower 20s. During the day the temperature will rise to near 40, he added.

The District government and the Capital Transit Co. joined forces yesterday to rid major streets of snow. William A. Xanten, superintendent of the city refuse division and boss of snow removal operations in the District, said that at 1 a.m. yesterday 15 District sand trucks and 18 Capital Transit sand trucks were put to work.

At 6 a. m. Xanten started 110 scrapers and graders working and assigned 150 men to clearing crosswalks. Last night he had between 200 and 300 men hauling away snow.

Xanten estimated that with a "fair break" his men would have the main streets in the District cleared by today. He remarked that a slushy snow such as that of yesterday is more difficult to clear than dry snow. "It's tough on our equipment," he said.

The temperature hovered on the freezing point most of yesterday afternoon. A reading of 32 was taken at 3:26 p. m. The day's low was 25 at 3:20 a. m.

The snow produced several accidents and falls which sent persons to hospitals.

One auto crash, at 9 a. m., on Rhode Island ave. ne., near South Dakota ave., involved an auto driven by Donald F. Bixler, 21, of

The Washington Post Poll

Area Work Picture Reveals Slight Change Since April

In spite of Government cuts, the employment picture in Washington has not changed substantially since April, 1947, The Washington Post Poll reveals.

Sixty-two per cent of all those 14 and older living in Greater Washington are now in the labor force. Of the total labor force, 3 per cent are unemployed and seeking work.

These findings differ little from those of a Census survey of the Washington Metropolitan District made in April, 1947. At that time, 63 per cent of all those 14 and older were in the labor force, according to the findings, and 4 per cent of the total labor force were unemployed and seeking work.

United States Employment Service data on unemployment compensation in the District of Columbia also indicated little change in the number of people unemployed here. In June, 1947, 4176 people received unemployment compensation, as compared with 4351 in January, 1948.

There is a difference, however, in the type of compensation received. In June, 1947, 67 per cent of payments were to veterans under the veterans' law, while in January, only 23 per cent were of this nature.

These figures for unemployment compensation in the District are considerably higher than during the war. In 1945, an average of 1153 people received payments each month. In 1946, the average monthly figure jumped to 4163, while in 1947 an average of 2804 people received payments each month.

The drop in 1947 is related, according to USES, to the drop in the number of veterans receiving payments under the veterans' law. The number of veterans applying for unemployment compensation has leveled out and is now remaining fairly constant.

The Washington Post Poll data on the labor force and unemployment are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of people living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Local residents were asked:

We are interested in knowing how many people are employed these days, and how many are looking for work. How many people in your family are employed fulltime or part time?

The interviewers listed all family members living in the household who were 14 and older and obtained employment information

216th Birthday Anniversary

2400 Defy Weather to Honor Washington at Mount Vernon

Despite 5 inches of snow and a biting air, close to 2400 persons paid tribute to George Washington on his 216th birthday anniversary at Mount Vernon yesterday.

By late afternoon, more than 40 wreaths had been placed on the tomb of the First President by national and local organizations.

Speaking from the veranda of the historical mansion in a memorial service, Attorney General Tom Clark emphasized our country's need for the same "courage, hope and fighting determination" in facing the future as Washington needed and had in his day.

"Washington's ideals continue to guide the great Nation he founded and to influence the citizens that have succeeded to this heritage of his pioneering," he stated.

"A weary and war-torn world is looking toward the United States. We shall not fail in meeting this challenge . . . United in spirit, as we are here at this noble shrine, no foe from without or from within can stop us on our righteous path," he declared.

Clark's address was delivered to

20 Killed, 44 Hurt As Ski Train Hits Apartment House

Waedenswil, Switzerland, Feb. 22 (U.P.).—A special 10-car ski train jammed with 349 pasesngers on their way home from a weekend of skiing raced down a steep grade here today and crashed into a three-story apartment house.

Twenty persons were reported killed and 44 were injured. The impact collapsed the apartment house.

The train roared past several red signals while the engineer frantically yanked on the brakes, which apparently were faulty, officials said.

The special was switched onto a sidetrack so it would not run into other trains. It was going 45 miles an hour when the locomotive smashed through the building. The first three cars were almost completely destroyed.

The engineer suffered only shock and minor injuries.

William Green

William Green, who yesterday blasted the Taft-Hartley law, is generally regarded as one of labor's middle-of-the-roaders.

Green

Compromise choice of other labor leaders for the presidency of the American Federation of Labor in 1924 following death of Samuel Gompers, Green has held the $20,000-a-year job ever since.

Rumors circulated during the past several years that Green, who will celebrate his 75th birthday March 3, would resign the job, have yet to become fact.

Though Green, who has the air of a smalltown college professor and once wanted to be a Baptist minister, has never displayed the flash and militancy of John L. Lewis, Phil Murrary and other labor chieftains, he has been a courageous fighter for his beliefs.

Green was born in the soft coal mining town of Coshocton, Ohio, where his father, an English coal miner, had brought his Welsh bride three years earlier.

In 1946 Green, miner and son of a miner, was made a commander of the Order of the British Empire. He is also an Elk and Odd Fellow.

Watson B. Miller

Watson B. Miller, D. C. chairman of Brotherhood Week activities which began yesterday, succeeded Ugo Carusi as Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization last year at the age of 68.

Miller

A former engineer, traveler, veterans' affairs worker and Federal Security Administrator, Miller is a Hoosier by birth and now lives at 4704 Yuma st. nw. He saw much of the world as a boy with his father, a civil engineer, who introduced him to the art galleries and concert halls of many countries.

Miller was in South America building schools at the outbreak of the First World War. Joining the Army, he was in the Ninth Division and later with the 37th National Guard Division, becoming a captain in the motor transport service.

After the war, he operated a construction company, then, in 1923, began 18 years' work with the American Legion as chairman of its rehabilitation committee. He directed a five-million-dollar program of aid to disabled and wounded veterans and their dependents.

William A. Xanten

The biggest shovel in these parts is wielded by William A. Xanten, 43-year-old superintendent of the city refuse division.

Xanten

When a snowfall (like yesterday's) hits Washington, it's up to Xanten and his men to clear the important streets and crosswalks.

It's not a haphazard operation, this snow removal job. Over the years, Xanten has developed a master plan which is 100 pages thick. Each man's job is described in detail. Coordination of the master plan rests with Xanten.

"There are four major phases to the operation," says Xanten. "Sand is put on the streets in some areas. Plows work in others. Snow is actually picked up and hauled away from the busier sections. And our street cleaners make sure that crosswalks are swept, fire hydrants are operating, and drainage systems are functioning."

A native of Long Island, N. Y., Xanten was named head of the city refuse division in 1936. At that time he was believed to be the youngest department head in the history of the District government.

Xanten was a bank runner in New York City before coming to Washington at the age of 16. He worked for the American Red Cross for several years. He began his rise to the top of his department after being appointed to the District service as a clerk in 1926. He studied engineering for five years at nights at George Washington University.

He lives at 3355 Military rd. nw.

UMT Opposed By Educators, Council Says

By The Associated Press

The American Council on Education said yesterday that "nearly three educators in four oppose universal military training."

It reported this on the basis of a questionnaire to which 3600 replied.

"Sventy-three per cent," said the council, "do not regard universal military training as an essential to national security." It continued:

Seven out of 10 believe "there are measures for national security that would provide military security without universal training.

"Sixty-four per cent of those replying stated that they thought our countrty would be lulled into a feeling of false security were universal military training put into effect."

Legislation for universal military training is in the hands of the House Rules Committee, which has refused to send it to the floor for a vote.

The committee's stand, was indorsed yesterday by the National Council Against Conscription. It issued a statement over the names of 10 college heads asking that the bill be held up pending a closer study of total military needs.

tons, and on numerous shop-window signs.

The Truman in '48 note was sounded during a ceremony in Emancipation Square, celebrating the 100th anniversity of the abolition of slavery in the Virgin Islands.

At this ceremony, Mr. Truman told the islanders, "Freedom has many forms and it has been won and lost many times. The emancipation proclamation in the Virgin Islands was dated 15 years before the Emancipation Proclamation in the United States; but it was 72 years after the Declaration of Independence.

"The struggle for freedom is unending, and documents alone do not conclude it.

"Political freedom is one thing, but it is only the beginning. We must have freedom of the spirit—religious freedom, freedom from want, freedom from fear."

Of his host, the President said: "He is a very unusual Governor. I wonder how many Governors have drafted an organic act, then served as a Federal judge interpreting the act, and finally served as Governor administering the act? I think that is an unequaled record."

Mr. Truman reminded his audience that "we are celebrating a significant historical event today. One hundred years ago the man who was then Governor issued a declaration which freed the slaves in what was then the Danish West Indies.

"It was an enlightened document in more ways than one. For it provided for housing and care of the freedmen for an interim period."

Ralph Paiewonsky, an islander whose parents came from Lithuania, and who is the Democratic National Committeeman here, presented Mr. Truman with a hand-carved mahogany tray, and said:

"We wish you continued success and reelection in November."

This brought a cheer from the crowd, made up almost wholly of the descendants of slaves.

Mr. Truman, his face red from the sun and wearing a white linen suit and a Panama, faced the crowd from a flag-draped bandstand. He recalled that he first came to the Virgin Islands when he was a United States Senator from Missouri in 1939. He said he thought Charlotte Amalie Harbor was the prettiest place he had ever seen.

He paid a tribute to Governor Hastie, praised Peter Von Scholten, the Danish governor who emancipated the slaves in 1848, and expressed the hope that more and more continental Americans would come down to the Virgin Islands to enjoy their beauty and climate.

Governor Hastie praised Mr. Truman for the interest he has taken in the islands and announced that several "tokens of esteem" would go back with him on the Williamsburg.

Roy P. Gordon, chairman of the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John, gave Mr. Truman an engrossed resolution of welcome, and made a very nice speech.

It was noticed, however, that Gordon was not wearing one of the Truman lapel buttons, and it turned out that he was the Republican National Committeeman for the islands.

Like the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands are represented in the two great political parties, but have no voice in the presidential election itself.

After the ceremony in Emancipation Park, Mr. Truman got into an open car and went on a sightseeing tour. From a mountain top he could see islands and inlets in every direction, and could understand why Columbus named them after St. Ursula and her 11,000 Virgins.

Once he halted at a point of breath-taking beauty and looked out over the Caribbean Sea. According to tradition, one might have stood there centuries ago and seen Sir Francis Drake sail past on his way to attack San Juan in Puerto Rico, an onslaught that failed.

President Truman and Gov. Hastie and their staffs had luncheon in the hotel at Bluebeard's Castle. The legend about this lofty tower is that it was used by the French pirate called "Edouard de Le Barbe Bleu" because of the bluish tint of his long beard.

porters he did "not see what purpose Southern Governors hoped to accomplish." The Memphis Commercial-Appeal quoted him as saying that for the President "to back up on his proposal now would be political suicide."

Tuck Won't Attend Civil Rights Parley

By The Associated Press

Governor Tuck of Virginia said yesterday he would not be present when Southern governors discuss civil rights with Democratic Party leaders.

Tuck said he came to Washington "simply to discuss mutual problems with fellow governors of sovereign Southern States."

Tuck told a reporter he "made it plain" when he accepted membership on the governors committee that he "did not intend to see McGrath whatever may be the action of others."

Start Raising Funds

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 22 (AP).—Mississippi Democratic leaders, aided by some out-of-State representatives, began raising funds today to fight the Truman leadership of the national party.

Approximately 250 of them at a meeting here pledged $61,500 toward an initial fund of $100,000.

Labor Chiefs Join ADA Fight

can work politically—but it stays far from ADA's notion of what is liberal.

Reuther demanded that liberals "fight reaction in the Republican and Democratic Parties," and warned that ADA must not be allowed to be "the tail to anyone's political kite." But neither he nor anyone else had a practical idea of how to accomplish the first and avoid the second.

Green Gets Biggest Reaction

Green's unprecedented appearance before a political organization, and the vehemence of his promises of shoulder-to-shoulder action with the liberals, were noteworthy. They provoked the biggest reaction of the day on the part of the delegates.

Referring to his own organ for political action, the AFL Labor League for Political Education, he said its objectives "are closely akin to your own." Close working cooperation between ADA and the League is "essential," he said.

Before the Reuther and Green speeches, the convention took final action on its foreign policy platform. It went down the line for President Truman's program, but with one major deviation. It refused to indorse universal military training.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had pleaded with the organization the previous day to support UMT as a defense measure. And a large group of the convention sought to include a sentence indicating that if the military and defense situation took a turn for the worse, UMT might be necessary.

For the rest, however, the platform was an enthusiastic and eloquent indorsement of the Marshall Plan, the United Nations, its plan for the partitioning of Palestine, the acceptance of displaced persons into the United States and a flat resolve to "oppose further Soviet aggression."

The ADA declared it did not "abandon hope" for coexisting peaceably in the world with Russia, but contended that the best short-run hope for peace was the reestablishment of western Europe's economic strength which "will discourage Russian attempts at penetration."

For the long term it favored a world government with peace-insuring powers. But the convention overwhelmingly defeated the attempts of the different world government organizations—the United World Federalists and Union Now—to include planks giving them a blessing.

Finally the ADA went on record to the effect that "steps to establish world government cannot be undertaken until the success of the European recovery program and of related policies" create a more hopeful situation and climate of opinion.

Tomorrow, the convention's final day, the ADA will approve its platform on domestic political and economic affairs. It has also to elect national officers, and at the moment is short of candidates. Neither Wilson W. Wyatt, chairman, nor Leon Henderson, executive board chairman, wish to run for office again.

Wits quipped that the difference between the ADA and the Progressive Citizens of America, Henry Wallace's far-left third-party organization, is that the PCA "has a leader but no democracy, and the ADA has democracy and no leader."

PCA's convention, held in January in Chicago, was a remarkable contrast to the present affair, according to reporters who covered both. They pointed out that in Chicago there were no instances of the vigorous, though nonviolent, open debate which has characterized every policy decision of the present meeting.

Main Mukden Link To Coal Source Cut

Peiping, Feb. 22 (AP).—Victory-flushed Manchurian Communists today cut the railway to Penki (Penhsihu), a major source of coal for Mukden, which shivered with cold and apprehension.

The Communist attackers were described at part of the force that three days ago took Anshan, steel mill city 50 miles south of Mukden.

The only remaining producer of coal and electricity for Mukden was Fushun, 20 miles to the east. Pro-government correspondents predicted it was next on the Red attack list.

Fushun's fall would complete the Communist blockade of Mukden, whose population of more than a million already faces serious food shortages.

The official Central News Agency said the gloom of Mukden was lightened somewhat by word that government naval units had arrived with reinforcements at Yingkow, seaport 110 miles southwest of Mukden. Yingkow, however, continues under close Communist pressure, and Communist-held Anshan sits astride the route to Mukden.

'Intervention'

U. S. Policy In China Hit By Wallace

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace said today American Army officers are training new Chinese government forces and American bases "are now being secretly erected in Tsingtao and Formosa."

Accusing the Administration of military intervention in China, Wallace added:

"The seventh fleet and other units cruise constantly in Chinese waters. Involved are over 25,000 of our armed services.

"A total of 271 United States Naval vessels and a large quantity of aircraft and other war supplies have been turned over to Chiang Kai-shek for civil war.

The third party presidential candidate said "President Truman's request for an additional 570 million dollars to go to the corrupt Chiang Kai-shek government is one more phase of our financial and military intervention there."

War Crimes Judge Blasted

been "some mistakes" in the process of answering Wennerstrum, Deane declared "there was an emergency on and Taylor was trying to save the Nuernberg trials."

(The Chicago Tribune, in a copyrighted story from Nuernberg, Germany, tonight quotes Judge Wennerstrum, as saying that "the victor in any war is not the best judge of the war crime guilt."

("Try as you will it is impossible to convey to the defense, their counsel, and their people that the court is trying to represent all mankind rather than the country which appointed its members," the judge said.)

Hal Foust, the correspondent who obtained the interview, said he was sending a new story to the Chicago Tribune "about wire-tapping by the Army at Nuernberg."

Foust said this was the second time in six weeks that the "same thing has happened to me."

The Army said Taylor had sent Judge Wennerstrum a letter saying:

"If you in fact held the opinions you are quoted as expressing, you were guilty of grave misconduct in continuing to act in the case at all.

"Your statement that the trials are teaching Germans only that they lost the war to tough conquerors would be laughable if its consequences were not so likely to be deplorable.

(Judge Wennerstrum was quoted in the Tribune as saying: "The high ideals announced as the motives for creating these tribunals have not been evident. The prosecution has failed to maintain objectivity aloof from vindictiveness, aloof from personal ambitions for convictions. It has failed to strive solely to lay down precedents which might help the world to avoid future wars, to codify the rules for the conduct of governments and armies in the future.

Feels Justice Denied

("The lack of appeal leaves me with a feeling that justice has been denied."

(The story quoted Judge Wennerstrum as having told friends before he left Germany that "if I had known seven months ago what I know today I would never have come here.")

Taylor Continued:

"Your own tribunal, thanks to the wisdom, patience and judicial detachment of your colleagues, accorded the defendants a trial which can be an outstanding, sadly needed lesson to the Germans.

"One great obstacle to your trial having this beneficent effect is the wanton, reckless nonsense which you yourself are quoted as uttering.

"Instead of making any constructive move while you were here, you have chosen to give out a baseless, malicious attack during the last hours of your eight months' stay, then leave town rather than confront those whom you so outrageously slandered."

The war crimes trial which ended Thursday was heard by Judges Wennerstrum, George Burke of Michigan and Erward F. Carter of Nebraska. They sentenced Field Marshal Wilhelm List and eight other German commanders to terms ranging up to life imprisonment. They acquitted two generals.

The defendants were accused of directing the killing of thousands of wartime hostages in the Balkans. The court ruled that some of the killings were mass murder, but said many guerillas "failed to comply withthe rules of war" and thus did not come under protection of existing international law.

The court said other countries should have participated in the trial to remove any question of bias.

The Taylor letter said Judge Wennerstrum was quoted as saying the defense "had access only to such documents as the prosecution thought relevant to the case," and that the "prosecution had protested against making the complete documents available to the defense."

"You well know this is a wantonly false accusation," Taylor said.

He added that a "great mass of captured documents" was sent to Nuernberg from the Pentagon in Washington for the defense.

(Discussing evidence available to the defense, The Tribune quoted Judge Wennerstrum as saying: "The courts have been told that no pertinent material is being withheld, but I am sure the German defendants and their counsel, and the German people, are not confident of the prosecution delivery. Our tribunal introduced a rule of procedure that when the prosecution introduced an excerpt from a document then the entire document should be made available to the defense for presentation as evidence. The prosecution protested vigorously.

("General Taylor tried out of court to call a meeting of the presiding judges to rescind this order. It was not the attitude of any conscientious officer of the court seeking full justice. . . .)

Judge Wennerstrum's home in Chariton, Iowa. He is 58 and has served on the Iowa Supreme Court since 1941. He was appointed last June to the Nuernberg tribunal.

New Estimate On Greek Aid Due This Week

By the United Press

President Truman may send to Congress this week an estimate on new military aid for Greece and Turkey, Government officials said yesterday.

The second installment of the "stop communism" program is being drafted by the Budget Bureau, which called State Department officials in for private hearings.

The exact amount will not be known until it is approved by President Truman, who is vacationing in the Caribbean. But informants familiar with the project say it will add up to abount the same as the present program.

This would indicate the President wants between 250 and 275 million dollars, most of it for arms and equipment. Under the current 400-million-dollar program, Greece is receiving 172 million dollars for her armies and Turkey 100 million dollars.

Mr. Truman will get the bureau's final recommendations today or tomorrow by telephone or courier, and Congress likely will receive them by Friday.

Congresional leaders meanwhile are near agreement to start House action on the program while the Senate debates the European recovery plan. Later, the 570-million-dollar China aid program and the Greek-Turkish project will be examined by Senators while the House debates ERP.

2 Clash With Lucas on Aid

the ruthless band of Soviet totalitarian dictators planning desperately to sabotage this same plan," Lucts said.

But Knowland yesterday charged Lucas with "misrepresentation of the facts." He said the revisionists had strengthened the bill, rather than weakened it, by their proposed amendments. He added that he expects to support the full $5,300,000,000 authorization on the Senate floor.

Ball Strikes Directly

Then he struck directly at Lucas, saying:

"Apparently the New Deal senior Senator from Illinois is so accustomed to Congress being a rubber stamp for the Administration in power that he has lost sight of the fact that Congress under the Constitution has its responsibilities."

Ball, who expects to vote to trim ERP spending, said that Lucas appeared fo want a role for Congress not unlike that of the Czechoslovak Communist leaders "who brook no opposition or debate on what they propose."

The revisionists are planning another meeting this week to determine their strategy when ERP debate begins March 1.

Ball to Seek 3.5-Billion Cut in First-Year Aid

By The Associated Press

A proposal to cut the first year's spending under the Marshall Plan to $3,500,000,000 will be laid before 20 Republican Senators.

Senator Ball (R., Minn.) told a reporter yesterday he intends to offer that figure to the group which has been seeking to alter the European Recovery Program. He said he expects a meeting in the next few days.

Ball's proposal would cut $1,800,000,000 off the $5,300,000,000 total approved by the Senate Foreign Relatoins Committee for the 12 months beginning April 1.

Red Manchuria Victory By Summer Is Predicted

Peiping, Feb. 22 (NYHT).—Informed neutral observers here are predicting the Chinese Communists will take all Manchuria before summer. One of the best American experts on that region believes they may do so in April.

It is generally expected that the coup de grace will be delivered at Mukden.

Americans Walk Out on Red Diatribe

Vienna, Feb. 22 (AP).—Representatives of the United States and British legations walked out today on a speech in which the Russian high commissioner to Austria said the western powers are spending millions to foster war against the Soviet Union.

The high commissioner, Col. Gen. Vladimir Kourassov, spoke at a meeting marking the thirtieth birthday of the Red army.

The British legation was represented by Charge d'Affaires John Cheetham and the United States legation by Sidney Mellan.

Cheetham later said he had "started to fidget" when Kourassov began to accuse the "imperialist western" powers of having "subsidized Hitler's war."

"When he told the audience the same powers were now spending millions of dollars to foster another war against the Soviet Union," Cheetham said, "I thought his remarks were too insulting to my country and to the United States. Mr. and Mrs. Mellan felt the same, and we all left the hall together."

In Berlin today, Russian-controlled newspapers aid the Soviet army is the mightiest in the world and stands "now, as always, on battle footing."

A Moscow dispatch said it was reported there that the Soviet armed forces had received a congratulatory message from the United States Army leadership in Washington, in connection with the anniversary.

7 Greeks Die As Guerillas Raid Prison

Athens, Greece, Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Press reports from Tripolis today said a force of some 150 to 200 heavily armed guerillas raided a prison Gythion in the southern Peloponnesus during the night, killed the chief guard and six gendarmes and liberated 15 Communist prisoners.

The group made its surprise attack after cutting communications and blowing up a bridge. They set fire to the prison and fled as government reinforcements arrived, the reports said.

According to other dispatches, 16 persons described as guerillas were executed in northern Greece yesterday, making a total of 36 executions during the day.

European Union Urged by Dewey As Goal of ERP

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey said today the goal of the Marshall Plan should be the creation of a European union.

"Only in this way can the freedom-loving nations of western Europe acquire the strength to withstand aggression," he said in a message to a meeting called in support of the European Recovery Program.

The meeting was sponsored by the Human Relations Commission of the Protestant Council of the City of New York.

U. S. Demands Major Role for West Germany

London, Feb. 22 (AP).—The United States will insist on a major role for western Germany under the Marshall Plan, in tri-power talks on Germany opening tomorrow.

Responsible diplomatic officials, reporting this tonight, said France and Britain have professed a willingness to go along on one condition—that there be stringent guarantees against any resurgence of German military might.

The security demands will take top priority.

Britain has advanced a proposal for a political and military pact with France and the Benelux customs union countries—Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

The Benelux nations and France have declared this move must rest upon firm guarantees the countries will work together against any aggression from any quarter. In order to meet this condition, Britain has taken the lead in assuring the Benelux countries a voice at the talks on Germany's future.

Labor Law Perverts NLRB, Says Green

Federal Agency Is Now 'Prosecutor' Of Unions, AFL President Declares

By The Associated Press

AFL President William Green yesterday said that the first six months under the Taft-Hartley Act has made the National Labor Relations Board "into a prosecutor of labor unions."

Green's blast came as the board reported that 99 per cent of workers participating in "union shop" elections under the act during January had voted in favor of such a contract provision.

Green said the first six months under the act had "intensified" organized labor's antagonism to the measure because of these developments:

"1. The National Labor Relations Board, a Government agency created to protect the right of labor, has been perverted by the Taft-Hartley Act into a prosecutor of labor unions.

"2. Injunction suits have been filed in the courts against an increasing number of unions, thus confirming our warning the law would bring about revival of the injunction evil.

"3. Damage suits against the unions by employers are already reaching astronomical proportions.

"4. Long-standing harmonious labor-management relationships such as those between the International Typographical Union and newspaper publishers have been disrupted by the Taft-Hartley Act and similar disputes threaten to engulf the Nation's industry when present contracts expire.

"5. Organizing activities have fallen off 25 per cent in results in the Nation and 75 per cent in the South, due to the aid and comfort which the law gives union-hating employers."

See "People in the News" on Page 2 for sketch of Green.

Record Set By January NLRB Cases

More labor cases were filed with the National Labor Relations Board in January than during any period in its 12-year history, it was announced yesterday.

During the month, 3008 cases were filed, which was 45 per cent more than in December, even though December was a record-breaker.

In January, 1191 elections were conducted, an all-time high, with 122,844 workers voting.

7237 Cases Pending

As of the end of the month, a total of 7237 cases were pending. A little more than one fourth were hangovers from Wagner Act laws.

Of the cases filed in January, almost 90 per cent were petitions for various kinds of elections. Some 71 cases alleged unfair labor practices by unions and 252 complained of unfair labor practices by employers.

Among the election petitions, 27 asked for a vote on decertifying unions. Most of the pettiions, however, were for elections to authorize the union shop.

Heavy Union Shop Vote

Of the 1191 elections held in January, the biggest category was also the union shop authorization. There were conducted 993 such polls, and in 99 per cent of them, or 979 cases, the union shop received the majority vote of the workers.

Eight decertification elections were held during the month. Six of them resulted in decertifying the union, and in two cases the union was continued as the bargaining agent of the workers who voted.

In 190 collective bargaining elections during January, 69 per cent of the voters favored recognizing the union involved. The AFL won 75 out of 111 elections in which it participated; the CIO won 32 out of 45, and the independent unions won 30 out of 48.

Man's Exaltation Of Self Deplored

Ideas of national or racial superiority were deplored yesterday by John W. Gulledge, as annual Methodist "Laymen's Day" was observed in many churches.

Gulledge, vice president of the Columbia Title Insurance Co., spoke last night at Francis Asbury Methodist Church, 3146 16th st. nw. He was formerly Sunday School superintendent there.

Gulledge declared, "We are all children of a common Father and with Him there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond br free, chosen or unchosen, all being endowed with the kind of nature—the spark of divinity—that makes us all akin.

"There is no place in this God's one world—for the illusion or delusion that the people of one nation or race are superior in His sight to all others. The one thing that places a people with Him is the spiritual condition of their immortal souls."

Flemming Is Speaker

Civil Service Commissioner Arthur B. Flemming said that Christians cannot afford to be indifferent to the suffering of millions abroad.

Speaking at the 11 o'clock service at Chevy Chase Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Shepherd sts. nw., Flemming, also president of the Federation of Churches, declared:

Our government is now being brought face to face with the issue of what we are going to do to bring recovery to the war-torn nations of the world. It is an issue on which Christians cannot afford to be indifferent. If we are not willing to give until it hurts, it means that lives will be destroyed now and that indeed we will be sowing the seeds of bitterness that will inevitably lead to another armed conflict."

Judge Charles S. Woodward, of the Montgomery County Court, addressed the service at 9 a. m. at Chevy Chase Methodist Church. Speaker at Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn sts. nw., was Andrew H. Phelps.

'Youth Week' Service

Adults took "back seats" yesterday as annual "Youth Week" began at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw.

Fifteen-year-old David Kopf read the Scripture lesson to a congregation that included his parents—the Rev. Carl Heath Kopf, pastor of First Church, and Mrs. Kopf; his brother, John, 13, and a sister, Ann, 6.

The principal youth speakers—Margaret Lorenz and John Preston—reminded their audience that hope for world peace and brotherhood rests in the hands of Christian youth.

Miss Carol Benson conducted devotions on the program, sponsored by the Tuxis and Scrooby youth organizations of the church. Miss Elizabeth Bushong, new presided, gave the invocation and the Lord's Prayer. The Junior Choir, standing in the balcony, sang an anthem, "If, With All Your Hearts."

200th Year

Fete Planned In Frederick County, Md.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Tentative plans for a public dinner meeting to mark the 200th anniversary of Frederick County this year are now under way, Charles McC. Mathias, chairman of a Frederick County Historical Society committee, has advised the county commissioners.

Present plans are for the meeting to be held Saturday, June 12, probably at Hood College. It was on June 11, 1748, that an act was passed by the General Assembly of Maryland creating Frederick County. This act took effect on December 10, 1748.

Britain Aids Arabs, Jewish Agency Charges

Lake Success, Feb. 22 (AP).—The Jewish Agency for Palestine charged today that Britain is helping the Arab battle against partition.

The agency submitted a 12,000-word memorandum to the United Nations Security Council and the Palestine Commission. It said a British policy of "tolerance" has encouraged enemies of partition.

The agency also contended that Britain's professed neutrality in Palestine has weakened the Jewish defense and seriously threatens peace.

It was the first such lengthy accusation by the agency against the British since the U. N. Assembly approved last November a plan to divide the Holy Land into Jewish and Arabic countries. The Security Council will debate Tuesday the question of setting up an international force to support partition.

Recognized Repreesntative

The U. N. has recognized the agency as the representative of the Jews of Palestine.

The agency charged the British have taken stringent measures against Jewish defenders while adopting "a policy of comparative leniency toward Arab attackers."

A British spokesman said both Jews and Arabs have been guilty o fterrorist acts and that the Palestine government has been doing the best it can to keep order.

"It seems inevitable," the Jewish agency said, 'unless preventive action is taken internationally, that at an early date there will be a full-scale Arab attack upon the United Nations decision countered by a whole-hearted Jewish effort to defend that decision. The attack will be stronger and the defense weaker as a direct consequence of the mandatory government's policy and administrative practices."

The agency said Britain has failed to maintain law and order and refused to allow 'a suitable preparation of adequate security forces to function when the mandate terminates." This, it said, threatens peace.

Arthur Creech-Jones, British Colonial Secretary, declared meanwhile in a radio broadcast that British troops have acted with complete impartiality and have prevented open civil war.

Creech-Jones spoke on the University of Chicago Round Table.

Jewish Appeal Drive Backed By President

President Truman regards the 250-million-dollar campaign of the United Jewish Appeal as one of the most important undertakings that any group ever embarked on, Attorney General Tom C. Clark told 350 Jewish leaders yesterday.

Clark spoke during the all-day national conference at the Hotel Shoreham, where Henry Morgenthau, former Secretary of the Treasury and national chairman of the UJA, announced that the first phase of the campaign would be the raising of 50 million dollars in cash in 10 days beginning yesterday.

This sum will be an emergency fund for the security needs of Jewish Palestine and immediate European relief and rehabilitation, as well as refugee adjustment in the United States.

As one of the speakers backing the Jewish Appeal campaign, which he called a "campaign of peace," Clark said the Jewish leaders were "in effect doing on a private plane what the European Recovery Plan seeks to do on a public plane," and therefore were participating in the "world's campaign against totalitarianism," Communism and tyranny.

Morgenthau announced that Rabbi Israel Goldstein, William Rosenwald and Rabbi Jonah B. Wise, all of New York, would be national chairmen for the drive, while Edmund I. Kaufman, Washington philantropist and retired head of the Kay Associated Stores, has been named chairman of the national advisory committee.

Edward M. M. Warburg, chairman for Greater New York, and also chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee which distributes relief funds in Europe raised by the UJA, said more than 95,000 homeless European Jews would be helped to reach Palestine and other countries during 1948.

Declaring that he believed Congress would soon permit larger numbers of European refugees to enter this country, Edwin Rosenberg, president of the United Service for New Americans, said what will count most in the writing of such legislation will be "the answers that United Service and the Protestant and Catholic welfare agencies give to the questions about how many people we can take care of and how we are going to provide for them."

Julius Fligelman of Los Angeles, chairman of a UJA group which has just returned from a survey of Jewish needs in Europe and Palestine, reported that Europe is still a "vast concentration camp" for the $1,500,000 remaining Jews.

Blast Kills 43 In Jerusalem

Palestine has halted temporarily the Arab offensive in the two districts.)

Dig in Ruins for Others

Dirt-grimed squads of Jews dug tonight with picks, shovels and their bare hands for persons still feared buried in the Ben Yehuda ruins.

One of the first British policemen to reach the scene was beaten. British newsmen were threatened. The British military rushed up firefighting and debris-clearing apparatus, but the Jews refused to use it.

Arab military sources said the explosives were placed by "seven Arab commandos in Palestine police uniform. The commandos had been trained in Syria under Czechoslovak officers."

A British police report said that prior to the blast a convoy of three motor trucks and one armored car passed the Mustapha police station on the way to Ben Yehuda street.

In the turret of the armored car was a man "wearing a brown great coat and a blue police cap, and two persons dressed as soldiers occupied the cab of each truck," the report added.

Police Suspect Convoy

Police in an armored car became suspicious of the convoy and followed it. They saw the three trucks parked with the doors open near the Atlantic Hotel, one of those blasted.

"Smoke was seen coming from the rear of the first three trucks," said the report. The explosion followed.

The attackers' armored car was seen speeding westward out of Jerusalem, police said.

The Arabs posted armed guards in border areas between Jewish and Arab districts to guard against any Jewish reprisals.

A commander of Arab fighters in Jerusalem, told that the Jews were blaming the British, said:

"These people can be expected to be reluctant to admit anybody but themselves can handle bombs. The fact the men who bombed Ben Yehuda street wore British uniforms should not be surprising to the Jews. They've been wearing stolen uniforms and driving stolen British trucks on their jobs for six years."

A government statement said "it is considered unbelievable that this act could have been committed by members of security forces."

A Jewish Agency spokesman said Hagana was not prepared to make any formal charge regarding the blast, but was continuing to investigate.

Irgun Zvai Leumi, extremist Jewish underground group, blamed the British and said "as from today all British personnel, military or police, entering Jewish sections will be subject to execution."

The Jewish Agency said its militia would halt all British military vehicles entering Jewish quarters to examine their contents.

The two hotels blasted were the Amdursky and the Atlantic.

The Orion Cinema was damaged extensively. A commercial printing firm which had been issuing the Palestine Post, whose plant was destroyed in a similar bomb attack February 1, was demolished.

U. S. Policy On Partition Takes Shape

By The Associated Press

American policy on enforcing the division of Palestine between Arabs and Jews will be whipped into final shape today by Secretary of State Marshall.

Warren R. Austin, American delegate to the United Nations, will join Marshall and other top officials for the decisive round of conferences on the explosive issue. The subject is under an absolute secrecy ban in the State Department thus far.

Nonetheless, statements by President Truman himself have led to wide speculation here that the American government will (1) stick firmly to the United Nations decision for partitioning of Palestine and (2) support the recommendation of a United Nations commission for an international armed force to police the strife-torn Holy Land until independent Arab and Jewish states can be entrusted with their own security.

This line of speculation is based on the admiration that Mr. Truman expressed in a report to Congress Friday for the boldness with which the United Nations has thus far tackled world problems. He also said flatly that the U. N. was trying to settle the Palestine issue on the basis of partitioning the land.

With the prestige of the United Nations at stake, Austin will report the American position to the United Nations Security Council tomorrow. There was no preliminary hint as to whether he would indicate that American troops could or should be used, if he formally expresses favor for the creation of an international armed force.

His report is expected to become a major factor in determining whether the Security Council itself eventually orders an armed force to take over when the British surrender their authority there May 15. All their troops are due to be out by August 1.

Briton Pours Kerosene Over Self, Lights Match

London, Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Charles Lowthian, 73, told his wife he was going to cremate himself.

Lothian then poured a can of keorsene over his head and ignited his clothing with a match.

An inquest at Newcastle-on-Tyne ruled he committed suicide while temporarily insane.

Tidelands Oil Bill Foes Rally Here

By the United Press

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland protested yesterday that the Administration's tidelands oil bill was an invasion of State rights, and "we don't propose to stand for it."

He spoke at a luncheon attended by representatives of 44 States who will urge a joint Senate-House Judiciary Committee to approve legislation giving coastal States title to oil-rich tidelands.

Chairman Butler (R., Nebr.) disclosed that his Senate Interior Committee probably will shelve the Administration's proposal until the subcommittee hearings are completed.

"I' m sure that we would not want to conduct simultaneous hearings on a contrary bill," he said.

The Administration bill would give the Interior Department complete control over oil and gas resources in the 3-mile-wide submerged coastal strip. Ninety per cent of the revenue from their development would be returned to the States, either through direct payments or in reclamation benefits.

about each. Results indicated that:

Sixty-two per cent of all those 14 years of age and older are in the labor market.

Thirty-eight per cent are unemployed and not seeking work. This includes housewives, students, retired people, etc.

Of the total labor force:

Eighty-six per cent are employed full time (according to their own definition).

Eleven per cent are employed part time, or have a seasonal or intermittent job.

Three per cent are unemployed and looking for work.

Unemployment in families who were interviewed include a librarian who specializes in historical research, a doctor who is trying to establish a practice after being discharged from the Army, a teacher waiting for an appointment, a P-6 Government engineer, two students on the GI bill, an auditor, two Government clerks, a carpenter, a night watchman and a messenger.

No disproportionate number of Negroes or women was found among the Washington unemployed.

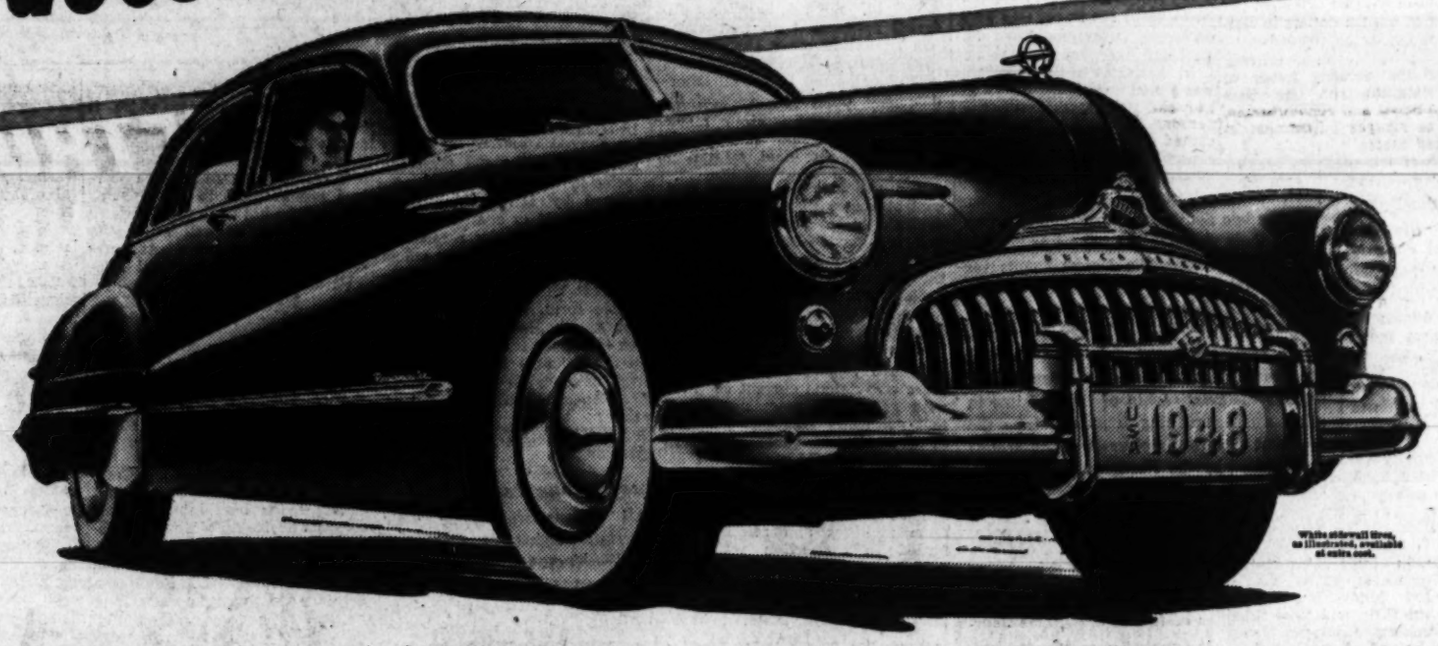
It does what no car ever did



Under the broad bonnet of this fashion-plate beauty is an engineering triumph as sensational as it's simple.

For this is the Buick Roadmaster with Dynaflow Drive,* and here for the first time in any car the power plant does what gears used to do.

Here is America's first car that permits you to glide swiftly forward, accelerate, surge up hills, slow down, stop, start off all over again — without any gearshifting, even automatic.

In a handful of seconds you get from standstill to highway speed with ski-run smoothness unmarred by halt, lag or hesitation. In a normal day's driving through city and country you do nothing but accelerate, brake and steer.

You never touch a clutch pedal — there is none. You never shift a gear — no gears ever shift anywhere in the car.

You just sit like a king on a big soft cushion — start the engine — set a lever — step on the gas treadle — and go!

How come this near-miracle motoring? How come there's no gearshifting — either manual or automatic?

No gears ever shift in DYNAFLOW DRIVE*

In Buick's new Dynaflow Drive, sliding gear transmissions and complex gear-changers are made unnecessary. You simply set a selector lever and step on the gas. The power plant does the rest, adjusting itself to varying driving conditions with utter smoothness. You start up — accelerate — climb hills — cruise — stop — start up again — all without touching the selector lever.

Only in Dynaflow Drive has the principle of the oil pump and turbine been fully developed for an automobile transmission.

Only here does smooth-flowing oil replace sliding gears as a means of changing the engine's driving force to meet the needs of starting, accelerating, cruising.

Only here do you move forward in a single, uninterrupted sweep of power entirely free of the usual steps through low, second and high gears.

And with this close-to-magic driving you have positive control under all conditions — an anchor-firm parking lock — cushioned going which can never overload or stall the engine.

Big news? But naturally!

So why delay visiting us? Come learn more about Dynaflow — and see if this single feature alone of the new Buick's 30-odd new advances isn't crowning reason for getting an order in right now.

*Optional at extra cost on Roadmaster models.

Tune in HENRY J. TAYLOR, Mutual Network, Mondays and Fridays

BUICK ALONE HAS ALL THESE FEATURES

★ DYNAFLOW DRIVE — smooth, silken flow of power with no gears ever shifting either manually or mechanically. (Optional, Roadmaster Series.)
★ TAPER-THRU STYLING — distinctive, tapering car-length fenders set a fashion of stand-out beauty.
★ VIBRA-SHIELDED RIDE — smooth, fatigue-free ride from scientific curbing of vibration build-up.
★ ROAD-RITE BALANCE — from low center of gravity; equalized front-and-rear-ride.
★ RIGID TORQUE-TUBE — In sealed chassis; protects moving parts, takes all driving thrust.
★ SAFETY-RIDE RIMS — check heel-over on turns; better car control, peak mileage and lower tire pressures.
★ QUADRUFLEX COIL SPRINGING — level-going buoyancy from a soft coil spring on each wheel.
★ FLEX-FIT OIL RINGS — In super-precise cylinder bores. New oil savings.
★ HI-POISED FIREBALL POWER — valve-in-head straight-eight engines in four power ratings, now cradled to new smoothness.
★ SOUND-SORBER TOP LINING — insulated for new "conversation tone" quiet. (Super and Roadmaster Models)
★ DUOMATIC SPARK ADVANCE — vacuumatic plus centrifugal action assures exact ignition for peak engine efficiency.
★ TEN SMART MODELS — In three series, featuring Body by Fisher and smart new interiors.

Biased Poll

The fact that the Washington Board of Trade got the replies it wished to hear from a minority of its members in its poll on the Auchincloss-Ball bill should occasion no surprise. Two thirds of the replies from board members who live in the District opposed home rule. But this means only that 1046 negative votes were cast by District residents, for 70 per cent of the board's members declined to return their questionnaires. Knowing the obstructionist attitude of the board's hierarchy on this issue, it is reasonable to assume that many members who favor home rule ignored the board's poll.

Ample reason for doing so could be found in the misleading information sent out regarding the Auchincloss-Ball bill along with the board's questionnaire. Members were told that under the proposed charter all legislation to be passed by the District Council, including taxes and the budget, "is subject to veto by either House of Congress within 30 days and by the President during the next 10 days, before becoming law." The bill specifically provides that if the proposed joint Senate-House Committee on the District should not approve the amount of any item in the local budget it could "return the budget to the District Council together with such recommendations and comments as it deems advisable." There could be no veto of the budget. This single piece of misleading information on the board's circular is sufficient to distort the replies to its main question, for it gives the impression that the local government contemplated in this bill would be powerless to exercise the most vital municipal power without being hamstrung by a three-way veto.

In these circumstances, the board's poll is no fair guide to the opinion of its members on this important issue. And even if it could be accepted as proof that a majority of the city's business and professional men oppose home rule, as John A. Reilly, board president, interprets it, the response would only indicate a pathetic absence of democratic community spirit among those to whom the city should be able to look for constructive leadership.

Czechoslovakia's Turn

The refusal of President Benes of Czechoslovakia to accept a government comprised exclusively of Communists or Communist puppets, nominated by the Communist Premier Gottwald, is an heroic gesture, but a gesture nevertheless. No one knows better than M. Benes that he is without physical power to enforce the constitution; his position in many respects closely resembles that of M. Ferenc Nagy, the Premier of Hungary, before the Communist coup of last May. All that M. Benes can do is to put the Communists in the position where they must abandon any pretense of legality in their drive for power.

The warning that Czechoslovakia's time had come to be converted into a police state on the pattern established in Poland, Bulgaria and Hungary, was given a few weeks ago when the Communist Minister of the Interior, Vaclaw Nosek, began removing important police officials from their jobs and replacing them with members of the party. This precipitated a crisis in the Czechoslovakian Parliament. The various non-Communist parties united to carry a motion demanding that the Communist police officials be dismissed. This demand was ignored by M. Nozek, and last week all the non-Communist ministers resigned. It was at this point that M. Gottwald presented his list of ministers to M. Benes with the demand that they be accepted under threat of "internal upheaval." Meanwhile, the familiar charges of conspiracy in the interest of "foreign reactionaries," meaning, of course, the United States, were loudly aired by the Communist propaganda.

In the face of M. Benes' resistance, the Communists' one hope of obtaining control of Czechoslovakia by constitutional means lies in persuading or coercing the Socialists into joining them in the formation of a popular front. In this way the Communists could muster a parliamentary majority. In Czechoslovakia the Socialists have shown symptoms of the same ambivalence that has characterized them elsewhere within the Soviet orbit. Until last week they had been supporting Premier Gottwald, but voted to break with him over the police issue.

Czechoslovakia, unlike Bulgaria and Hungary, is not occupied by Russian troops; but if the Communists are prepared to resort to a seizure of power by force and terror it is probable that the country has already been infiltrated by professional revolutionaries trained for the purpose at Moscow. Since the Czechs are a people well accustomed to freedom and are genuinely inculcated with democratic ideas, the possibility of resistance to such a seizure cannot be wholly discounted. In that case the Czechoslovakian crisis would instantly become a world crisis of the first magnitude.

Unfinished Business

Congress was pointedly reminded last week that its reorganization job has been only half done. The mechanism of the legislative budget needs to be improved; many committees are still inadequately staffed; majority and minority policy committees have yet to be set up in the House; the joint legislative-executive council proposed by the La Follette-Monroney Committee has not yet been created; debate is still unlimited in the Senate; the House Rules Committee is still vetoing legislation; and the seniority rule in the selection of committee chairmen is depriving both houses of their natural leadership, with the result of weakened party responsibility and dwindling prestige for Congress as a body.

We think the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments is to be commended for examining the results of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 and looking toward further improvements. If just one additional reform could be achieved this year, it would give the next Congress an advantage of inestimable value in carrying out whatever program the people approve at the polls.

It is no secret that the Republican leadership of Congress has been critically handicapped by the seniority rule. Several chairmanships of key committees are held by doddering old men who are no longer able to keep pace with the exacting demands of the age in which we are living. Others are in the hands of misfits and reactionaries who no longer have the feel of the public pulse, if they ever did. These men have been exerting an influnce upon policy-making out of all proportion to their numbers because of the strategic positions that age and length of service have given them.

The two most powerful committees in the House are under the sway of chairmen who are sadly out of step with the most vigorous and constructive elements in the Republican Party. We doubt that John Taber of Appropriations or Harold Knutson of Ways and Means or Clare Hoffman of Expenditures would have a look-in if committee chairmanships were distributed on the basis of merit and for the purpose of giving effect to policies favored by the majority members of the House as a group. On the whole, the seniority rule seems to have brought forward a more representative group of leaders in the Senate than in the House. Yet it has put Senator Capper at the head of the important Agriculture and Forestry Committee at an age when he is quite unable to keep up with its responsibilities.

Blind choice in the selection of chairmen has thus prevented the Republican Party from putting its best foot forward. From the national viewpoint that is deplorable, and from the partisan viewpoint it comforts only the Democrats. For the sake of its own reputation with the voters, who are likely to judge the G. O. P. performance as a whole, we should think that party would be eager to free itself from the incubus of the seniority rule. This can be done, as Dr. George B. Galloway testified, by having the Committee on Committees select the chairmen as well as the members of the standing committees in either house. The same group should have the power, subject to confirmation by caucus or conference, to replace chairmen whenever that may seem necessary to the carrying out of party policy. How long will it take the Republicans in Congress to realize that they are undercutting their own strength by sentimental deference to senility?

Defiant Doctors

An overwhelming majority of British doctors have voted against participation in the National Health Service to be inaugurated next July. The plebiscite was conducted by the British Medical Association, which, as the London Times points out, had virtually committed itself to organizing a boycott of the service if a specified proportion of general practitioners, specialists and consultants opposed entry under the terms laid down by the Health Act. The battle lines have accordingly been drawn up with the BMA directing the campaign for the doctors and Minister of Health Aneurin Bevan leading the fight for the government.

The threatened doctors' strike is not directed against socialized medicine, as some Americans may infer. For Britain already has an extensive system of contributory health insurance, and most of the country's physicians obtain a large part of their income from panel practice. The new health insurance system, providing universal free medical service, is merely an extension of that system. Furthermore, doctors electing to enter the service will be free, as at present, to engage in private practice in their spare time. But it is obvious that if the great majority of them decide to stay outside the system, it cannot function. Organized opposition of the sort contemplated is, in fact, not an expression of individual choice but a form of pressure that, if persisted in, would amount to sabotage of a governmental program that apparently has the backing of the British people.

The dispute revolves about certain provisions of the law, such as abolition of the sale of practices, refusal to allow doctors dismissed from the state service to appeal their cases to the courts, and a proposal to pay a basic salary to all doctors entering the service, in addition to payments for each patient treated. The doctors also object to a provision to exclude additional general practitioners from areas regarded as "overdoctored"—the intention being to make medical service available to all. The opposition of the doctors to the salary proposal is based on fears that it might be the first step toward establishment of a full-salaried state medical service that would make doctors public officials, entirely subject to state control. No doubt that same fear underlies objections to other aspects of the program.

Since neither the doctors nor the government can afford to risk a stalemate, it seems highly probable that the dispute will be settled eventually through mutual concessions, despite Mr. Bevan's adamant stand. The conflict does, however, emphasize a fact that is often forgotten—that the success of any plan for the socialization of public services depends upon the cooperation of the few as well as the many. A small determined minority can by concerted action wreck the best laid plans of any government if they possess special skills or training indispensable to its effective execution.

Antarctic Imperialism

The unique interpretation placed on the Rio defense pact by both Argentina and Chile with respect to the Falkland Islands dispute emphasizes the importance of a clear and universal understanding of international treaties. Both Chile and Argentina maintain that the Rio agreement setting up a Western Hemisphere security zone precludes the recognition of any European colonies or claims within the zone. On this basis the two South American countries are assiduously pressing the controversy with Britain as to the Antarctic. Argentina lays claim to most of the land to which Britain professes title, including the Falkland Islands proper, the South Orkney and South Shetland Islands and a slice of the Antarctic Continent to the South Pole. Chile meanwhile is asserting rights in the same area. She now has rather grandiloquently given the name Bernardo O'Higgins Land to the Palmer Peninsula, or Graham Land, as it is known by the British.

Secretary Marshall gives no weight to the Argentine and Chilean reservations to the Rio pact. The United States stated at the time of the Rio conference that nothing in the treaty had any bearing upon questions of sovereignty within the security zone. This seems to us a wholly logical interpretation. The purpose of the Rio pact was to protect the Americas against outside aggression, not to upset the status quo with respect to territories. Certainly Argentina and Chile cannot hope for the treaty to be construed as calling for relinquishment of British, French and Dutch possessions in the West Indies and the Guianas. Argentina's attempt to misuse the Rio accord is especially unctuous, since she has not yet ratified the pact.

If the two South American countries persist in their views on the import of the Rio defense agreement, the logical course for them would be to ask the World Court for a ruling as to its meaning. We think there is compelling reason for the whole question of Antarctic territorial claims to be settled on a world basis. How the State Department regards the relationship of these claims to other world problems is indicated by the fact that American interests in Antarctica are handled by the Northern European Division.

Mr. Stimson's Misgivings

The third installment of the memoirs of Mr. Henry L. Stimson, appearing in the current number of the Ladies' Home Journal, tells of his opposition to the Morgenthau Plan for converting Germany into pasture. Mr. Stimson's point at the time was that the pleasure of pure vengeance should be subordinate to economic expediency. It appears that Mr. Morgenthau was summoned to the Quebec Conference in the autumn of 1944 by the President, and there converted Mr. Churchill to his doctrine by the rather sordid argument that the dismantling of German industry in the Ruhr and the Saar "would create new markets for Great Britain." Mr. Churchill thereupon agreed to draft and initial the memorandum wherein it was stated that Anglo-American policy was "looking forward to converting Germany into a country primarily agricultural and pastoral in its character."

By how many months this memorandum may have delayed the German surrender is of course a matter for mere speculation, but of the ultimate consequences of the spirit it embodies there can be no doubt. If we can trust Mr. Stimson, he was virtually alone in his opposition to the plan. Secretary Hull, he says, was as eager for revenge as Mr. Morgenthau himself and "ready to dump all the principles he had been laboring for in regard to trade for the last 12 years."

However, the generally unfavorable reaction to the Morgenthau Plan in the American press (among which Mr. Stimson might have mentioned an editorial in this newspaper called "Samson in the Temple") appears to have given Mr. Roosevelt pause. At a luncheon with the Secretary of War on October 3, 1944, the President managed to persuade Mr. Stimson that "the Quebec memorandum did not represent his matured opinions." Nevertheless, says Mr. Stimson:

> . . . the attitude which it [the Morgenthau Plan] represented remained, and continuous pressure was exerted . . . for a stern directive to General Eisenhower on the treatment of Germany. The eventual product of the debate was the directive known as J. C. S. 1067; rereading this order two years later, Stimson found it a painfully negative document.

"Rents And Prices"

In your February 17 editorial you assume, as I believe you have assumed in the past, that to be "fair to landlords" the Congress should permit them to raise their rents "proportionate(ly) to the actual demonstrable increase" in their costs.

How are you convinced that this is fairness? I think it reasonable to understand you to mean that for the landlord whose tenant did not agree to the legal 15 per cent increase you approve an increase (over prewar) of the exact amount by which the landlord's costs have advanced. But this is quite a different approach than that which you exhibit in other cases—there come to mind the cases of teachers and of unionized industrial laborers. For them cost-of-living increases have been your rule; and you have not plainly rejected for unions the highly favorable use, as a base, of war income of 1945.

The rationale of existing rent control seems to me simple and cynical. There are many tenants and few landlords. It is a fine thing to give tenants a gratuity through rent ceilings. It is convenient, and politically safe, to do this not at the expense of the general treasury but out of the pockets of landlords.

I have a simple proposal for those who defend current controls with general arguments such as that decreased vacancies amount, in effect, to adequate increases. Let the projected amendment of the act permit landlords to receive increases of 50 per cent on an actual yearly income basis, for the same facilities and services afforded in connection with the rented premises in 1940. (This increase may be compared with the 10 per cent increase already received by union labor, to say nothing of the third round advances now claimed.) So far as it was not desired to grant this increase on the landlord's formal statement of the 1940 income from the premises, proof could be required to extend to facilities and maintenance.

What I have suggested would not end the discrimination against landlords, since they alone would remain under ceilings imposed by law on their incomes. It would limit their increases to half the increase already enjoyed by union labor and it would doubtless place on the average landlord the not inconsiderable burden of proving his right to the modest permitted increase.

British Bankruptcy

Mr. Walter Lippmann's excellent article of February 17 discusses "the coming crisis of liquidation" of the British nation and empire as if that dread event were a foregone conclusion, declaring that America and other countries must prepare to meet the impact of Britain's imminent bankruptcy with "many drastic and unprecedented measures." While it is certainly wise to be so prepared, cannot your paper suggest some measures that America can take to help prevent that disaster?

British bankruptcy need not and should not happen, and I do not expect it to happen. The crisis continues to grow increasingly grim, but the British people will, I believe, grapple with and conquer it. They are fortunate in possessing still the ablest statesman of this and perhaps of any generation, and I predict that before succumbing to impending disaster they will both heed Winston Churchill's call for a general election and restore him to supreme leadership for the emergency.

As soon as that prospect emerges as a practical probability, confidence in the future of Britain will strongly revive and the whole course of British affairs will be healthily redirected and revitalized. That I believe to be Britain's and the world's brighter destiny.

Meanwhile what practical measures, besides the Marshall Plan, can America take to help the British people work out their sure salvation? We cannot take sides in their political contests, nor can we offend by proffering an unsought financial grant or its equivalent—even if Congress conceivably could generate and pass such a measure. But cannot private financial aid for physical reconstruction on a large scale, similar to that in France after World War I, be stimulated by your paper and others?

And how about the "fraternal association" of our two countries proposed by Mr. Churchill two years ago? If in addition to voluntary private aid for reconstruction, popular support of an official British-American defense and development compact were to take tangible form, would it not give heart to the British people now when they need it most? Shall we lose the valuable benefits to ourselves of such an association by failure to establish it while there is time?

Anonymous Accusations

All citizens who value their prescriptive rights are indebted to The Washington Post for its admirable work in spotlighting the un-American activities of the Un-American Activities Committee. But more democratic educational work needs to be done for the benefit of those in public life who are playing fast and loose with principles upon the preservation of which the future happiness of America depends.

May I recommend through you to all members of the committee, indeed to all Congressmen, the reading at this time of the letter written to the Emperor Trajan by Pliny, Governor of Bithynia, Asia Minor, about 112 A. D., and the Emperor's reply? I quote briefly from them:

"I am also uncertain," Pliny writes, "whether nominal Christianity without crime deserves punishment, or only when crime is coupled with it . . . This is the procedure I have adopted when any so-called Christians have been brought before me. I asked them if they were Christians. If they admitted it, I asked them a second and again a third time, adding threats of death. If they still claimed to be Christians, I gave orders for their execution . . . An anonymous accusation appeared, containing many names. Some . . . denied they were or ever had been Christians. As they joined with me in invocations to the gods and offered supplications with incense and wine to Your Majesty's ikon . . . and finally cursed Christ, I thought they could be discharged . . ."

The Emperor okayed Pliny's procedure on the whole, but warned him "there should be no search made for Christians," adding, "Public accusations by anonymous persons should have no place in criminal practice. Such a procedure would be thoroughly bad and out of keeping with the spirit of our age."

Vandenberg's Service

I would like to comment on the outstanding job which Senator Vandenberg has performed as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in charge of the hearings on the Marshall Plan.

Senator Vandenberg's never-failing courtesy; his keen desire to hear all that the witnesses had to say; his search for the truth as it lay between differing points of view were in sharp contrast to other hearings where witnesses are badgered and prodded and treated as though they had committed some crime because they dared to come before a congressional committee to state their views.

Senator Vandenberg has revived our faith in the sound workings of our democracy which is based on the pooling of different points of view until a sound solution has been reached. We members of the audience at these hearings are grateful to the Senator for what he has done for the cause of democracy as well as in the effort to bring about a better understanding of international relations as they exist today.

UPWA Affidavits

Your editorials on the strike in tthe Government cafeterias have done a useful service in making clear the real issues involved. You have pointed out that GSI has brought in the matter of non-Communist affidavits, which are not necessary for bargaining in this case, as a device for alienating public support from the workers.

Unfortunately, this GSI tactic has been successful. Even the Secretary of Labor, who was among the first to express the opinion that non-Communist affidavits were not necessary in this case, has now told Abram Flaxer, head of the parent union, the United Public Workers, that he will do nothing to settle the strike until the officers have filed non-Communist affidavits.

It appears that some advisers of the cafeteria workers have told them that the signing of the affidavits by their local officers is sufficient. It should be made clear to the workers that the signing of the affidavits by their local officers is a useless gesture unless the national UPW officers do the same thing. These officers may feel, like Philip Murray and John L. Lewis, that it is against their principles to sign such statements, but the position of a Government workers union is completely different.

Many Government workers might have felt that it was against their principles to sign the loyalty pledges, but they did so because it was a question of their jobs. When it is a question of the jobs of 1500 cafeteria workers, Abram Flaxer and the other UPW officers should not hesitate to sign.

Delayed Buses

Dora Sander's letter of February 18 on Capital Transit service prompts another.

On a number of mornings recently there has been a 20 to 30 minute wait for the W-8 bus operating in the Southeast from Garfield Loop to the Navy Yard. Since the riding time is no more than 20 to 30 minutes, this means the total travel time is at least doubled.

The company's explanation is that the normal schedule of 10-minute spacing—or in fact any schedule—is impossible to maintain when operators fail to show up on time or at all.

This amounts to a deprivation of service. It is inconceivable that some shift in personnel or other means cannot be found to improve the situation. Let the company take note that victimized commuters can hardly be expected to look with sympathy upon requests for any fare increases.

'Pioneers! O Pioneers!'

THE DIXIE FRONTIER, by Everett Dick. (Knopf, $4.50.)

The influence of the frontier on American institutions and the American character is still a matter of dispute among the historians. There are some like the late Professor Turner who consider it to have been decisive and on the whole beneficent, some like the late Professor Parrington who consider it to have been disastrous, and some like Professor Hacker who think that its importance has been exaggerated. As far as I know, Professor Dick, though he has staked off the frontier as his special field of interest and investigation, has not entered the controversy, but has been content to provide the materials for it. The present work, I take it, is meant to complement or at any rate to supplement his earlier studies of the Mountain Men and the Nebraska and Dakota settlers. This time he is concerned with the lives and manners in the early nineteenth century of the inhabitants of the country beyond the Appalachians and below a line somewhat north of the Ohio River extending into Indiana to the point where the streams of northern and southern emigration appear to have converged. It is to this vast area that he has given the name of the Dixie frontier.

Here as elsewhere the frontiersmen were of the various characters represented by the successive waves of migration—first the huntsman or trapper, hardly distinguishable from the Indian in his manner of life, wh opushed on into new country when the game thinned out; then the squatter, or cabin settler, who supported himself and his family by hunting and a little desultory farming; then the land sharks and finally the permanent cultivators. Many of those in the last category brought with them their slaves and in the cane and cotton growing areas the plantation system was well established by the second or third decade of the century. Some of the shrewder or more energetic of the earlier settlers increased their holdings, bought slaves, waxed rich and learned in time how to give themselves airs; the others were pushed from the bottom lands into the hillsides, where many of their descendants now remain, to the great worry of our sociologists. In the plantation country class distinctions grew rapidly, "even while there were miles of forest between plantations," and the great feudal lords of Mississippi and Alabama were if anything haughtier than their cousins of the tidewater and seaboard. Feudal hierarchies of rank of course existed also among the slaves; the house servants, whose status tended to become hereditary, were disdainful of both field hands and poor whites; the plantation slaves despised the slaves of small farmers. Slavery appears to have become prevalent everywhere in the area of the Southern migration, even in the lower sections of the old Northwest Territory, where it was prohibited by law, but preserved, as Professor Dick tells us, under the fiction of indentures.

In any case, the slaves fared much better than the Indians. The frontiersmen paid no attention to treaties and the Government was powerless to prevent them from encroaching upon Indian lands and despoiling the tribes. Many frontiersmen had the habit of killing Indians on sight. It is not clear whether the whites or Indians began the horrible business of mutilating the bodies of those slain in the frontier war—Professor Dick says that it was not originally the Indian practice; but it is certain that the frontiersmen not only took scalps but were even given to some of the barbarous practices that shocked us so much in the Nazis, for example the excoriation of corpses and use of Indian skins in articles of handicraft. After the tribal power of the Indians was broken, and there was nothing more to be feared from them, the survivors were regarded merely as nuisances by the new settlers, because they were obliged to subsist by thieving or begging. It was at this point, says our professor, that their once implacable enemies, the old pioneers, became their sentimental patrons. But by that time of course the frontier ways had been considerably softened; among other things the old-fashioned gouging matches and bowie-knife combats were being replaced by more refined amusements such as horse racing and cock fighting and dueling with silver mounted pistols.

A bookish reader might be tempted to discover in the sort of world described by Professor Dick certain analogies to the world described by Homer. Scalping or skinning a dead Indian is not very different stripping the armor from a fallen enemy and tying the corpse to one's chariot to be dragged in the dust. In the frontiersman for all his barbarism and cruelty we find a sense of personal honor akin to that conveyed in the Greek word aidos. There is the same patriarchal social organization, the same emphasis on the duty of hospitality, the same disposition to boasting, the same contempt of lying, as in the case of the backwoodsman who threw children's copy of Robinson Crusoe into the fire when he discovered it was a made up story. Professor Dick tells us that the frontiersman spoke in a kind of poetry or at any rate a kind of elaborate metaphor. It is true of course that where the Achaoi were despoiling a dead or dying civilization, the frontiersmen were despoiling a magnificent wilderness; but the destructive genius was in each case much the same.

Today And Tomorrow

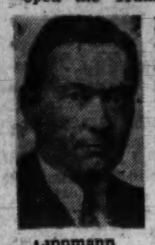
The Jefferson-Jackson Day Speech



Lippmann

LAST WEEK at the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner in Washington Mr. Truman developed the Truman doctrine of American history. It is that "the supporters of Jefferson organized a political party of progressive liberalism which has continued in American political life down to the present day" and is now "known as the Democratic Party"—and that "the followers of Alexander Hamilton also banded themselves together" as a party of conservatism, indeed of "reactionary conservatism." Though he refrained from naming it, Mr. Truman did say that those who banded themselves together under Hamilton have their "counterpart in our national life today," and it is generally presumed by well-informed observers in Washington that Mr. Truman meant the Republican Party.

Since the earliest years of the Republic, Americans have had, it appears, to make the choice between these two "parcels"—the Republican parcel containing government for "the privileged few" and the Democratic parcel containing "true democratic government."

THE FITTING of American history into these two parcels will keep any man busy—and diverted from the harsh realities of the present—who tries it. But he will not succeed in fitting history into these two parcels. He will be like a man trying to make two watches that tick out of the unassembled parts of a refrigerator and a vacuum cleaner.

For in making up the Republican parcel under the Truman doctrine of our party history, it would be quite puzzling to know what to do with Washington, with Lincoln, with Theodore Roosevelt, or with Norris, Pinchot, Borah, La Follette, or with Stassen, Morse, Aiken, Tobey, and Ives today. In making up the Democratic parcel it would not be clear just what to do with Franklin Pierce and James Buchanan or with Flynn, Hague, Pendergast, and Pauley in more recent times. The historians of the Truman school would feel like the railway porter in the English magazine Punch who had to label a cat, a guinea and a tortoise before they could be shipped. The railway was prepared only for dogs. So, said the bewildered porter, "cats is dogs, and guinea pigs is dogs, but this 'ere tortoise is a hinsect."

I DOUBT very much whether a good campaign issue can be made by a forcible rearrangement of history. For the truth is that the two parties have not divided on the issues which divided Hamilton and Jefferson, and neither party is or has been the sole, or even a consistent, exponent of either political philosophy.

Lincoln, for example, though a Republican, was in his main convictions in many ways much closer to Jefferson than to Hamilton. Franklin Roosevelt, though a Democrat, was closer to Theodore Roosevelt in the cast of his thought than to Woodrow Wilson. Not only in foreign affairs but also in domestic, his conception of the United States as a great power, and of the national Government as an instrument with the widest powers for positive action, was not at all Jeffersonian—quite the contrary in fact.

It was the Republican isolationists who opposed Franklin Roosevelt with the Jeffersonian slogan of "entangling alliances with none." It was the anti-New Deal Democrats and the conservative Republicans who called upon Jefferson as witness against the centralization of power in a great bureaucracy under a Democratic President.

MR. TRUMAN'S excursion into history was, of course, for the purpose of rallying around himself the same majority which four times elected Roosevelt. But he is mistaken, I think, if he supposes that the political power of Roosevelt was based wholly, or even chiefly, on his progressive liberalism and its popularity among the various groups which make up the less favored part of the people.

Roosevelt came to power in 1932 because a strong, new Administration was needed to bring the country out of a condition of prostration and collapse. He was continued in power after 1940 because he had grasped and mastered the overriding issues of war and peace. Roosevelt was incidentally a New Dealer; he was above all a crisis President—first in domestic affairs and then in war. It was his ability to grasp and master crises, not the reforms which were incidental and improvised, that gave him his unprecedentedly long hold upon the country.

MR. TRUMAN cannot, I think, duplicate Roosevelt's performance by identifying himself with the incidental and improvised reforms—by presenting himself as a kind of synthetic and denatured New Dealer. The real issue now, as in Roosevelt's epoch, is the ability to grasp and master crises. Today it is the crisis of the unsettled peace and of the threatened war and of the obstructed recovery.

What the people will look for, must look for, is not who can promise the most to the largest collection of pressure groups, but who offers the best hope of a firm, coherent, lucid Administration of the Government in the fearful crisis through which this country and the world are passing.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

A Philadelphia Daydream

THE SCENE is the squalid chaos of the Republican convention at Philadelphia. The time is the moment when the deadlock becomes final between Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft. Suddenly, the name of Senator Arthur H. Vanberg is placed before the convention.

Gov. Harold Stassen, already aware that he cannot make the grade himself, takes his place at the head of the Vandenberg procession. On the next ballot, the Stassen delegation, the Michigan delegates, and strong elements of the Pennsylvania, New England and Western delegations, are already riding high on the Vandenberg bandwagon. On the ballot following, Vandenberg receives the Republican nomination for the Presidency.

THE FOREGOING is the extremely practical daydream of a number of astute and seasoned players of the great game of politics. These daydreamers, to be sure, conspicuously do not include Senator Vandenberg himself. He is still not conniving in any draft-Vandenberg movement. But several vital factors make it wise to take another look at the truth of the Senator's own maxim, that no presidential candidate has ever been drafted who did not connive in the draft.

The first of these, and the most important, is the existence of the daydreamers aforesaid. There is a very simple reason why a genuine draft is so difficult. A draft movement, however spontaneous it may seem on the convention floor, requires careful advance preparation. For this preparation, there must be organization. Unless the prospective draftee is an accomplice, the work of organization and preparation is ordinarily impossible.

In Senator Vandenberg's case, however, this rule emphatically does not apply. The daydreamers include the Michigan National Committeeman, Arthur Summerfield, a number of other leaders of the Michigan organization, and more than one key figure in other States. It is a fair prediction that they will have completed the necessary minimum of organization and preparation by the time the Republicans assembly for their quadrennial bean feast and delegate rodeo.

The daydreamers are doing their daydreaming without encouragement from their candidate. He has done more than avoid them. Some time ago, he made a public request to the men of his home State to line up behind some other candidate. Then Gov. Kim Sigler and other Michigan chieftains declared their determination, at a recent Michigan meeting, to take a Vandenberg delegation to Philadelphia all the same. After this episode, Vandenberg let it be known that if the State convention seemed likely to name Vandenberg delegates, he would reiterate his former request in a manner that could not be misunderstood.

THE CHANCES ARE, therefore, that the Michigan delegates will either divide between Taft, Dewey and other candidates on early ballots, or will propose Governor Sigler as the State's favorite son. This does not distress the daydreamers, however. Indeed, it helps them. The draft will be all the more real.

What encourages the daydreamers even more is the shrewd calculation they have made regarding Governor Stassen. As a presidential candidate in his own right, Stassen is now forging handsomely ahead. Yet the odds are still heavily against him. In the event of a Taft-Dewey deadlock, Stassen is unlikely to swing to either Dewey or Taft; since he has done the equivalent of slapping the face of the former and punching the chin of the latter.

But on Lincoln Day, in a speech in Pennsylvania, Stassen went out of his way to remark that the only Republican now comparable to the Great Emancipator was Senator Vandenberg. This clearly suggests that if he cannot get the prize himself, Stassen would regard a Vandenberg-Stassen ticket as the next-best thing.

Altogether, always supposing that a Dewey-Taft deadlock develops (for there can be no draft without a deadlock) there is only one real obstacle to the daydream coming true. That obstacle is the Senator himself. The reports as to his health are utterly unfounded. He is often tired, because of a work schedule that would kill most men of 35, whereas he is exactly the same age as President Truman. But his doctors have now found that he is in better condition physically than almost any other man of his age.

The Senator is an obstacle, rather, because he seems ready to prevent a draft movement, by actual personal intervention, if massive opposition develops from the more antiquated Republican State organizations. Thus far, the Senator has been beyond attack, in stating that he is not a candidate, but that no one can reject a draft. But it is hard to see how he can defend the position of giving the worst elements in the Republican Party a power of veto over the mass of the party's will. This does not make sense.

Va. Assembly In Final Rush

Richmond, Feb. 22 (AP).—Members of the Virginia General Assembly tomorrow will begin the final three-week rush of the current biennial legislative session.

Hundreds of bills remain to be disposed of, and scores more probably will be introduced tomorrow, which is the deadline for introduction of general measures.

Official adjournment date of the 60-day session is March 13.

Immediate interest tomorrow will focus on the Senate, where the Richmond charter and the House-passed bill to forbid further expansion of intercity branch banking will be on the calendar. A showdown on these items, however, may be deferred until Tuesday, leaders have said.

This week should see (1) final disposition of the Tuck 14 million-dollar-a-year tax increase program; (2) emergence of the big biennial budget bill from the House Appropriations Committee; (3) some indications of what will happen to Governor Tuck's State government reorganization program; and (4) definite clews as to what will be the fate of the Moncure-Locher bill aimed at outlawing the Communist party, the Murray bill to repeal the State's open shop law, and the chiropractic license bill.

Five of Governor Tuck's tax bills have been passed by the House and are in the Senate Finance Committee. There are some expectations the Senate group will report the tax bills Tuesday for action by the Senate before the week is ended. A sixth Tuck tax bill—to raise public utility gross receipts levies by one-half per cent—is still in House finance committee, where it was delayed by controversy over whether its effect will discriminate against railroads in favor of highway truckers.

The House Appropriations Committee Chairman C. C. Louderback said last week the biennial bill should be ready for presentation to the House Wednesday or Thursday, but that it probably would not be acted upon until next week.

Washington's Birth Marked

the entire Nation over the Mutual Broadcasting System. Earlier he placed a wreath at Washington's tomb on behalf of the American Legion. Wreaths were also placed there by George Washington Post No. 1 and Alexandria Post No. 24.

In the late afternoon the Alexandria Post held a dinner at Gadsby's Tavern, where Washington and his wife attended a birthday dance in his honor 150 years ago.

A motorcade of Veterans of Foreign Wars traveled to Mount Vernon in the morning. Wreaths were laid at the tomb by Commander-in-Chief Ray H. Brannaman and Mrs. Dorothy Mann, National President of the Ladies Auxiliary. The ceremony was followed with a luncheon at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria.

Following a wreath-laying ceremony at Mount Vernon, the Alexandria-Washington Lodge No. 22, A. F. and A. M., held a service at Pohick Episcopal Church, where Washington worshiped when he lived at Mount Vernon.

Program for Today

With today a legal holiday because Washington's Birthday fell on Sunday this year, the following commemorative services have been scheduled:

A parade at 2 p. m., sponsored by the Alexandria VFW Post. Units will form at Jefferson and St. Asaph sts., to parade north on Washington st. to Princess st.

A joint observance by the Sons of the American Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution, Sons of the Revolution and Children of the American Revolution, at 10:30 a. m. at Continental Hall. Chief Justice Marvin Jones of the United States Court of Claims will be guest speaker.

A communion service at the Church of the Epiphany at 8:15 a. m., followed by a fellowship breakfast at the National Press Club, at which Jennings Randolph, former Representative from West Virginia, will be guest speaker. The affair is sponsored by the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

Senator Cain to Speak

An address by Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) before members of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District at 11 a. m. at the Old Union Engine House.

Meeting and banquet at the George Washington Masonic National Memorial, opening at 5 p. m. Speaker will be Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa).

Dinner by the Baltic Scandinavian Society of Washington at 7:30 p. m. at 1625 Prince st., Alexandria. Dr. Leonard Elstad, president of Gallaudet College, will speak.

Pilgrimages will be made to Mount Vernon for wreath-laying ceremonies by: The Irish War Veterans at noon, at which time Senator George W. Malone (D., Nev.) will give a brief address, and by the Washington Centennial Masonic Lodge at 1 p. m.

District schools and banks will be closed today. Most downtown stores will remain open until 1 p. m.

Attorney General Has a Busy Day

Attorney General Clark got a real workout yesterday. Sitting in George Washington's pew, he helped mark the 175th anniversary of Christ Church in Alexandria in the morning. At 1:15 p. m., he spoke and laid a wreath at Mount Vernon. About 2 p. m., he addressed the National Conference of United Jewish Appeal at the Shoreham and then hurried over to the Interior Department auditorium to launch American Brotherhood week.

On the Line
—With Considine

Considine

Here's a preview of the interview, by special courtesy of the Ouija Television Corp., Ltd.

Shaw (pulling smartly at beard)—What do you think of my "Man and Superman"?

Joe (pleasantly surprised)—I didn't know you drew that. It's really hot. Boy, old Superman really zips through the air and catches them rascals. Every time.

Shaw (with start)—You have apparently read into my opus a spiritual insight which escaped the author. Did you like "Joan"?

Joe (scratching)—Yes and no. Me and Marva hadn't really busted up when I was gone with her, so I called it quits. Last time I heard from her she was singing in Cafe Society, Downtown.

Shaw—Hmmmn. What about "Back to Methuselah?"

Joe—I'm fighting him again in June, provided he signs up in the next two weeks. Where does that old bum Walcott think he gets off . . . givin' me and Sol Strauss the run-around and yellin' for 30 per cent?

Shaw—Did you get the subtle meaning of "Major Barbara"?

Joe (grinning)—I sure did. I'm readin' a comic—one of your Superman books—one day and leanin' against the wall of the PX when this Wac major marches past and I don't see her, see? What a dressin' down she give me for not salutin'.

Shaw—I suppose you're familiar with "Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant"?

Joe—Yup. Lost a C-note on that catch Gionfriddo made off my good friend Joe DiMaggio in the sixth game of the series. It should've been in there.

Shaw—Did you take in "Heartbreak House"?

Joe—Yeah, but it was Sol's fault—and the radio. You see, he had to put those shows in the Garden irregardless of whether he could find any fighters or whether nobody showed up. Account of the radio's gotta go on at a certain time with a fight every Friday night.

Shaw—You're the second heavyweight champion I've met. I ran into your man Tunney, I believe his name was, when he was over here a few years ago. Made me very angry by criticizing my boxing story, "Cashel Byron's Profession." Very angry. Took 15 or 20 years off my life, the bounder.

Joe—You gotta get accustomed to those things. Writing sports like you do doesn't come easy. Turning out something every day must get a guy down. Even Jimmy Cannon takes Sunday off.

(Joe gets up, yawns.)—Well, I gotta run. Couple English heavyweights I've gotta knock over tonight. It's been mighty nice talking to you. I'll tell Toots I saw you.

Shaw—Toots?

Joe (surprised)—Your nephew—Toots Shaw.

Shaw (sternly)—If I had a nephew named Toots it would be a niece.

Joe (flabbergasted)—You ain't related to Toots?

Shaw—Certainly, not!

Joe (going off)—Wait'll I lay my mitts on that Dan Parker!

ONE NIGHT before the untimely death of Damon Runyon, whose recently published "Trials and Other Tribulations" is a first class book, Runyon was having an argument with his faithful friend, Eddie Walker, over the respective merits of Joe Gans and Henry Armstrong.

Walker rambled on, aloud, about Armstrong, the man's record and his greatness in winning three boxing titles and tying for a fourth. But when he got into the matter of what Armstrong would have done to Gans, if their orbits had collided, Runyon began dispatching stronger and stronger notes across the table.

Finally Walker said, "I not only say Armstrong would have licked him; he would have flattened Gans in two heats."

Shocked at such heresy, Runyon took his writing pad and in forceful strokes wrote ,"No!" each letter was about three inches high, and the exclamation point was like an impaled javelin. He handed it to Walker like an ultimatum.

Walker, who looks as if he were born on Jacobs Beach, read it, looked down and mumbled:

"Okay. But you don't have to shout at me."

Are You a League Bowler? —Then PBC Tourney Is for You

Tomorrow is jumping off day for the Metropolitan Police Boys Club benefit bowling tournament sponsored by The Washington Post with the cooperation of the Metropolitan Duckpin Operators Association.

The tournament is open to all men and women who have rolled at least 15 league games this season.

At every alley in the area, you league bowlers will be able to enter the boys club benefit.

For 50 cents you will receive an entry form, on which you fill in the scores of the three games you roll during your regular league competition.

Every bowler will be able to use his full handicap, based on scratch of 128 for men and 118 for women. And a bowler can enter from as many leagues as he rolls with.

First prize for men will be $100 and for women, $50. Other handicap prizes will be awarded according to the number of entries in the tournament. Last year the week-long affair attracted 8700 bowlers.

The 1947 winners split a prize melon of $1251. The boys club received $2962.50.

In addition to the handicap prizes, awards will be made for high scratch game and set scores in both men's and women's divisions.

Official scorekeepers and prize judges are Julie Singer, manager of the Greenway alleys, and Hap Newman, Chevy Chase Ice Palace bowling manager. Their decisions will be final.

Beginning tomorrow, the tournament will run through Monday, March 1. That will give every member of every league a chance to enter.

Martinsburg Site Of Section 13 Play

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 22.—Representatives of the nine schools which will compete in Section 13 of State tournament play voted, 8 to 1, to conduct the competition at Martinsburg's gymnasium, March 3 through 6.

After the draw it was announced that Martinsburg and Berkeley Spring will meet in the first game at 7 p. m. Other opening-day games pair Wardensville and Hedgesville, and Charles Town and Paw.

The second day matches Shepherdstown and the Martinsburg-Berkeley winner, and Harpers Ferry and Mathias.

St. John's Wins, 38-33 Takes Title

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Holding their opponents scoreless in the final period, St. John's Cadets won their 21st victory of the season and the Catholic Prep championship of Washington by downing Gonzaga, 38-33, yesterday at the National Guard Armory.

A crowd of 1500 saw the Cadets, defeated in only one game this season, hand Gonzaga's scrappy quintet its fifth loss against 15 victories. It was St. John's second triumph this year over Gonzaga.

Forced to play without their star forward, Clem Conlin, whose father died Saturday, the Gonzagans threw their supporters into a frenzy by holding the favored Cadets even, 22-22, in the first half and moving in front, 33-30 at the end of the third quarter.

Spicer, Nolan Star

Deadly set shots by little Jack Spicer and some great rebound play by tall Mike Nolan, had overshadowed the individual brilliance of Jack George, St. John's high-scoring forward.

But the Cadets threw up an impregnable defense as the final period began. As the Gonzaga boys vainly tried to get the ball into Nolan in the pivot posts, George, Al Weaver and Big Tom Fannon intercepted pass after pass.

And St. John's, shooting erratically a few minutes previous, began to hit. George's basket enabled the Cadets to draw up to 33-32 and a moment later Paul Fitzpatrick dropped a free throw to tie the score.

George Scores 17

Fouls by Vince Durkin and Fitzpatrick put the Johnnies ahead, 35-33 and with two and a half minutes to play George sealed the victory with a foul and a basket.

High scoring honors went to George, with 17 points while Nolan and Spicer each bucketed 11 tallies.

The St. John's Jayvees gave the Cadets a clean sweep for the day by beating Gonzaga's junior varsity, 35-21.

American U., Terps on Road

Washington's only active collegiate court teams today play out of town, Maryland meeting Clemson at the South Carolinians' court and American University tangling with Loyola in Baltimore.

Fresh from a one-point triumph over South Carolina Saturday, the Terps will be seeking a repeat victory over the Tigers and a stronger grip on a Southern Conference tournament berth.

For America its clash with the leading Mason-Dixon Conference club will offer a chance for reveneg for an earlier beating.

The Eagles, however, have already clinched a tourney berth along with Catholic University, their latest victim.

Clifton Streak Stopped at 23

Richmond, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—The Richmond Barons snapped the winning streak of the Clifton Comets of Washington at 23 today, capturing an 81-53 victory before a crowd of 2,000 in Blues armory.

In a previous game here, the Comets had beaten the Barons, 52-49. Richmond started fast and displayed amazing accuracy in shooting to forge into a 44-22 lead at halftime.

Hamilton's 280 Beats Haas By Stroke in New Orleans

New Orleans, Feb. 22 (AP).—Bob Hamilton of Reynold, Ky., sank an 8-foot putt on the eighteenth green here today to win $2000 first prize money in the $10,000 New Orleans open by a single stroke.

Hamilton staged a furious finish to pass up the local pride, Fred Haas, jr., who had led the parade until today. Bob's 34-35—69, two under par and ending with a pair of birdies, gave him a 72-hole total of 280.

aas wound up in a second-place tie at 281 with Lawson Little, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Roberto De Vicenzo of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Freddie, leader by five strokes at the halfway point and two last night, had 36-38—74 today. De Vicenzo came back after a shaky first nine for 37-34—71. Little shot 33-36—69.

There was tension on every stroke in that threesome, and twice members called for a ruling on playing procedure by George Schneiter, PGA vice president and tournament committee chairman.

The first call came on the thirteenth, where Hamilton first caught up with Freddie in the scoring. Haas' ball was on the edge of some water which lay in a shallow ditch.

Hamilton Takes Issue

The point at issue was whether the ditch was a drain or not. The rules permit a player whose ball is in water in a drain ditch to pick it up and drop it behind him.

Schneiter said the ditch was a drain, and Freddie picked up. But Hamilton wasn't satisfied with the spot he dropped it, and said the rules required dropping "as nearly as possible" to the water. Haas picked up and dropped the ball again.

He went one over par on the hole.

PGA Titlist In 1946

Hamilton was PGA champion in 1944 and his last major victory was the Charlotte Open in 1946.

He played this tournament with a brand new set of clubs, following an argument in the Rio Grande Open at Harlington, Tex., over the legality of clubs with deep grooves.

Haas' clubs were questioned by Bobby Locke of South Africa after the first round, and Freddie filed down four of the faces to reduce the size of the grooves.

Joe Moore, jr., of Louisiana State niversity's golf team, was low amateur with 290. His 36—37—73 gave him a one-stroke lead over Doug Ford of Larchmont, N. Y., who had 35—37—72.

The leaders, with scores and winnings:

Bob Hamilton	211	69—280	$2000
Fred Haas, jr.	207	74—281	1066.67
Lawson Little	212	69—281	1066.67

Snavely Will Act Today on Offer by Dons

Chapel Hill, N. C., Feb. 22 (AP).—Carl Snavely, head football coach at the University of North Carolina, said tonight that he expected to announce tomorrow whether he would accept an offer to become coach of the Los Angeles Dons of the professional All-America Conference.

Although Snavely said that he was deferring his announcement until tomorrow, friends of the 56-year-old coach seemed confident that he would remain in Chapel Hill.

The Los Angeles club announced officially several days ago that it had offered the job to Snavely and, although details were not made public, it was reliably reported he was offered a salary of $25,000 plus a commission.

At North Carolina, Snavely is under a five-year contract which has two years to run, and it is understood that his salary is $12,000 a year.

Daniels May Land Yale Job

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 22 (AP).—Norman Daniels, whose past two Wesleyan football teams have been unbeaten and untied, appeared today to be the favorite candidate for the Yale football coaching job.

The soft-spoken, personable former Michigan all-round athlete, was interviewed here yesterday by the Yale advisory football committee and officials of the university. An authority reported Daniels made "a fine impression."

The name of Daniels has been linked with that of Rip Engle of Brown and Ray Morrison of Temple as the final choice to succeed Howie Odell, who resigned last month to accept the head coaching job at the University of Washington.

Lions Routed Again, 10-3, By New Haven

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 22.—Scoring almost at will, the New Haven Ramblers chalked up their sixth victory in seven starts against the Washington Lions this season, snowing under the cellar-clients of the Eastern Division, 10-3, before a capacity crowd of 4000 here tonight.

The Blueshirts moved out to a 2-1 lead in the opening session, increased the edge to 6-3 in the middle canto and registered four times while holding the Rileymen scoreless.

Playing-coach Jack Riley showed his men how it should be done in the third session, snaking a short shot past Doug Stevenson at 6:15. Johnny Carr-Harris cut the margin to 4-3 two-minutes later, driving a sizzler into the twines.

Lineup: Washington	Pos.	New Haven

Bolen Boosts Olympic Hope

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Dave Bolen of Boulder, Colo., one of America's top-ranking quartermilers, loomed today as this country's best bet in the 400-meter race in the London Olympics next summer.

Providing one of the biggest surprises Saturday night at Madison Square Garden in the National AAU track and field championships, Bolen stamped himself as the man to beat in the 400 meters by capturing the 600-yard run in convincing fashion.

The "600" is the nearest thing to the Olympics' 400-meter in indoor season. Bolen defeated such distinguished sprinters as George Guida, Villanova College' defending champion; Herbert McKenley of Jamaica, world record holder for 400 yards, and Bob McFarlane, Canada's champion. All are likely to meet in London.

William Mitchell of the Georgetown College AA failed to survive the semifinal round of the 60-yard high hurdles.

Mitchell, who finished first in the preliminary in 7.7 seconds, and was second in the quarter-finals, ran third in the semifinal.

St. Anne's Triumphs In CYO Game, 42-12

St. Anne's swamped Nativity, 42-12, in a CYO Junior Basketball League section 1 game yesterday at Nativity.

Results of other league games:

Section 1—St. Gabriel's 25, Blessed Sacrament 17; St. Michael's 37, Our Lady of Victory 16; Our Lady of Lourdes 26, Georgetown Prep, 20.

Section 2—Holy Trinity 66, St. Paul's 27; St. Stephen's 30, Calvert 15; St. Thomas 32, Immaculate Conception 24.

Then He's Scooped With Chips On Line

must be done on an obstacle course. Cards have to be passed over and around a sea of salted peanuts, potato chips, pretzels, etc.

When the main refreshments are served, the situation becomes worse — coffee, sandwiches, etc. It's murder. No wonder the cards get sticky.

Complicated enough at best, the game is further scrambled by conversation, particularly that of the husband-wife combinations.

For instance, Leslie, our banker, was having trouble keeping his chips on the table and, at one stage, was spending more time on the floor retrieving than at the table playing.

He wasn't lucky, either. His better half, Jen, lit into him when he came up once with a cream cheese-smeared cracker that he mistook for a white chip.

Late in the game, Leslie beat Jen out of a big pot and raked in the chips so enthusiastically a half stack dropped on the floor.

Leslie was on his hands and knees hunting them when the next deal was completed.

Jen gathered his hand and said, "Stay on the floor. I'll hand your cards down to you."

Sculler Kelly Wins Sullivan Trophy

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—John B. Kelly, jr., of Philadelphia, diamond sculls champion, was presented the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy today as the amateur athlete who did the most to advance the cause of good sportsmanship in 1947.

Rhodies Win In 'Cold War' Set to Music

Orono, Me., Feb. 22 (AP).—University of Maine President Arthur A. Hauck and Rhode Island Coach Frank Keaney took to the basketball floor last night in a lively discussion that followed ejection of a harmonica-playing Rhode Island forward.

Players and fans joined in the brief uproar late in the game, which Rhode Island won 55-46.

Dr. Hauck dashed onto the court after Keaney trotted out to protest Referee Johnny Fortunato's banishment of Stan Santoro, who manned the mouth organ from a sitting position as his mates worked the ball away from Maine.

Popcorn bags, newspapers and other missiles flew from the crowd in a tumult that died down after Keaney resumed his place on the bench.

Rhode Island, after running up a 29-17 halftime lead, concentrated on ball-freezing tactics. They baffled most of the Maine players except Teddy Boynton, The game's scoring standout with 23 tallies.

After the interruption on the floor, the remaining 30 seconds of the contest were played without a score.

Lacy's 44 Tops

Baltimore, Feb. 22 (AP).—The 44 points Jim Lacy of Loyola scored against Western Maryland represent the highest single game scoring effort in the country, the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau reports.

Previous high was the 38 points scored by Norman Hankins of Lawrence Tech.

$20,000 for Reynolds

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Allie Reynolds, New York, Yankee pitcher who refused an earlier offer, signed today for a salary reported in excess of $20,000. Reynolds won 19 games and lost 8, compiling 242 innings and striking out 129 batters.

Portland Golf Prize Up

Portland, Oreg., Feb. 22 (AP).—Prize money for the fourth annual Portland Open golf tournament has been upped to $15,000 and the site listed for the rugged Alderwood Country Club course here.

The tournament, which will be held September 30 to October 3, previously offered $10,000.

Bobsled Winners

Scare Story

London, Feb. 22 (AP).—Joe Louis is not bringing any "4000-pound ($16,000) car" over here to drink up this island's scarce, rationed gasoline, his representative assured British sport fans today.

The mass circulation Sunday News of the World told its seven million readers about the car, in the caption for a picture of Joe and Mrs. Louis leaving New York on the way here for an exhibition engagement.

California Leads

New York, Feb. 22 (U.P.).—The best way to break into Major League baseball is to be born in California, but spring rosters of the 16 clubs revealed today a lad born in Canada, Scotland, Italy of Czechoslovakia can make it, too.

The hoodoo States of '48 are Maine, Delaware, Rhode Island and North Dakota. They won't be represented among more than 600 candidates who'll be romping around the training camps on March 1. California, as usual, led the Nation with 76 candidates.

Leg Growth Bursts on 'Cinderella'

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22 (AP).—Assault, the clubfooted "Cinderella" of the thoroughbred racing world, is to be retired effective immediately.

Robert J. Kleberg, owner of the champion which has earned $626,620 to become the third-ranking money earning race horse in the world, said Assault will be shipped to Kentucky "for at least a year."

He ran fifth in the $50,000 Widener classic at Hialeah, four lengths behind his arch rival, Calumet Farm's Armed.

Kleberg said Assault, which won triple crown honors in 1946, burst an osslet, a growth on the horse's ankle peculiar to racing thoroughbreds in the race Saturday.

Thus the racing career of a horse that wouldn't let a crippled foot interfere comes to an end.

First Injured in '43

Assault's future as a champion race horse was nearly ended in 1943 when he stepped on a surveyor's stake on a Texas ranch. The stake, which drove into the right fore foot, caused a permanent injury which made it necessary to wear a specially-made built up shoe.

The malformation has caused him to be called the "Club-footed Comet" and the "Cinderella of the turf."

In 1946 he developed a kidney ailment which threatened to cut short his racing career. But this too was overcome and he went on to be voted the "horse of the year" in 1946.

Twice last year Assault was the world's leading money earning thoroughbred. It was the same year that the title changed six times, juggling between Stymie, now No. 1, Armed, No. 2, and Assault.

Scored Against Rampart

A splint on his left fore leg was blamed for his poor showing in a $100,000 match race with Armed last year at Belmont Park. Assault ran six lengths behind the golden gelding.

The firing iron was applied to the splint and after a long rest in Columbia, S. C., Assault was shipped here this winter for the Widener.

His initial 1948 appearance was a success. He won an overnight event in a pohot finish with Rampart.

His showing in the Widener, where he was an even-money choice, was disappointing.

In 33 starts, Assault has had 16 victories, 5 seconds and 5 thirds. He finished out of the money only seven times.

He was 5 years old New Year's Day.

Armed to Rest

Meanwhile, Trainer H. A. (Jimmy) Jones of Calumet Farms said he had no immediate plans for Armed except to "leave him alone for awhile to freshen up."

"We'll let him gallop and see how he comes along. But I want to say Armed's usefulness as a race horse is gone if the handicappers are not convinced by now that he can no longer successfully carry such high weights.

"He tried hard as usual Saturday but he just isn't there any more."

Armed, which ran fourth in the Widener, shared a top impost of 130 pounds with Assault.

Haight Plays 'Columbus' at White House

Walter's Aunt Jen Snubs Four Queens

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

I WAS PLAYING CARDS the other night at the White House—Dick White's house, that is—and I was dealt the best hand of my poker career.

Haight

On the first four cards I received Maude, Kate, Clara and Hortense — Yeah Bo, four queens in a row! Now to you that might mean nothing, but to the bluff-and-call trade four of a kind, natural, represents a longshot variously estimated at odds of 200,000 to 1 and up.

You could have knocked me over with a discarded joker when I eyed those four pretty gals. Men have been murdered for holding such cards, but they certainly were welcomed. I hadn't won a pot.

How did I make out? Well, I finished fifth in a seven-horse race. How come. Aunt Jen had five aces; Cousin Hilda showed five Jacks; Uncle Leslie had a ten-high straight flush and the amried woman I live with turned up with all clubs from the four to eight.

What were we playing? A pasteboard concoction called "Columbus, 1492," all the aces, fours, nines and deuces wild.

I was burned up I almost stick my head in the open fire to cool off.

And with reason. Aunt Jen, reached out, scooped in the mountain of chips, eyed my four queens and cracked, "Interesting, aren't they—would you like to buy some more chips?"

That's the low level to which the once honorable game of poker has sunk. But it serves us men right. We let the women get a high-heel hold and now we couldn't pry them away from the table with a blow torch and a bull-dozer.

I don't know how the first woman got into a poker game, but I guess some husband found it easier to steal his wife's chips than to sneak money out of her pocketbook.

True, a man probably invented such a wild games as Spit-In-The-Ocean and Baseball, but it had to be a woman's touch that inserted honeys like Follow-The-Queen, Albany-Night-Boat, Dr. Pepper-No-Peep, Black-Bottom and the like.

The woman I would dislike to be shipwrecked with on a desert island if a deck of cards was around, is Aunt Agatha.

She has been a tough poker customer from the start. The first night she played, Leslie and I had almost identical flushes and were trying to figure who was high when Agatha, whom we forgot had called, peeped over a skyscaper of chips and asked, "Does a fullhouse beat a flush?"

At first Agatha had trouble determining the value of the hands, like the time she was leaving and turned to me and said, "Walter Haight, you lucky thing. You would have three tens when I had two pairs of king."

She's strictly a wild game gal. After an evening of playing all the seven-card, dealer's choice conglomorations, somebody said, "I'm going to deal old fashioned straight draw poker."

Agatha spoke up, "Fiddlesticks—deal me out. I don't know a thing about it."

Since the women moved in there's hardly room on the table for the cards and little or no chance for the men to break into the conversation. Dealing

Fourth Place At Stake In Contest

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

This week's 44-game scholastic basketball slate opens tonight with Eastern and McKinley Tech battling for fourth place in the inter-high race. Starting time is 8 p. m. at the National Guard Armory.

The winner will be awarded a place in the championship playoffs alongside Central, Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson, who clinched their berths last week.

Tonight's victor will face first-place Central Friday night at the Armory in the semifinals of the championship. Second-place Roosevelt clashes with third-place Wilson in the other semifinal.

The two Friday winners clash Saturday night at the Armory in the interhigh title game.

Tonight's game rates as a toss up. Tech went through its inter-high slate with a 4-4 record. Eastern had 4-3. The two teams played each other two weeks ago with Tech coming out on the long end, 43-40.

Tech is trying to gain the playoffs for the eighth straight year. The Trainers have made it every year since Hiram (Dutch) Usilaner came out of western Pennsylvania in 1940 to take over the basketball coaching reins at Tech.

Pacing the Tech attack will be 6 foot 3 inch Buddy Wickers, who scored 24 points last Saturday as the Trainers lost a 43-41 battle for third place with Wilson.

Eastern will depend on Long John Brown, pivotal center, who flipped in 21 points as Eastern toppled Western, 54-48, last Friday night.

Warner Wins Scoring Title

Wally Warner became the first Anacostia basketball player ever to win the interhigh scoring championship when he netted 10 points last Friday against Wilson. They brought his total to 110 points for the season.

Woodrow Wilson's Jack Whitcomb almost overtook Warner with a 21 point performance against Anacostia. It gave him 104 for the season and second place. Winner last year was Pat O'Neill of Wilson, who scored 104 points for the regulation seven game league slate.

Warner scored most field goals, 44, and had the best game average, ern February 6 were the most 16.7. His 25 points against Westscored in a league game this season. His field goal percentage was 44 out of 115 for .389.

Western's Wayne Brizendine, who finished third in scoring with 98 points led in most personal fouls committed, 25, and most foul shots drawn 55. Jimmy Pantos of Central, fourth leading scorer with 89 points, made the most foul shots, 27. Best free throw percentage was turned in by Billy Paugh of Roosevelt with 14 out of 16.

The scoring records do not include the extra playoff games for third and fiurth places.

'Ridiculous'

We Didn't Boo AHA, Player Says

Jim Sloane, a member of the United States Olympic hockey team, yesterday emphatically denied any booing of the American Hockey Association team by his teammates at the recent St. Moritz winter games.

The United States Olympic team, of which Sloane was a member, was not allowed to play at St. Moritz after a lengthy dispute as to which American team was eligible for the Olympics. The AHA team did play.

Sloane, Princeton, N. J., right wing, who just returned from Switzerland, was disturbed by the published reports he termed "outright lies."

While visiting friends here, Sloane told The Washington Post: "Naturally, we weren't happy over the wrangle that prevented us from participating but we certainly had no quarrel with the AHA players."

Calling the booing report "ridiculaus," he added that each team had three former Dartmouth players. In fact, Sloane reported, Dartmouth's Joe Riley was a member o fthe Olympic team, while his brother, Jack, played for the AHA.

He also said that when the AHA boys competed several members of the idle Olympic team sat on their bench.

A former Princeton University player who now competes for St. Nicholas A. C., Sloane was outspoken in his criticism of the International Ice Hockey Federatoin.

"The outfit dominates European ice hockey and operates on a purely commercial basis," he said. "Because of the gate reecipts that had to be realized at St. Moritz, it was able to defy the International Olympic Committee.

"By threatening to withdraw from St. Moritz, I think it demonstrated a complete lack of Olympic spirit."

2 Fight Cards Tonight As Promoters Battle

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

If the participants in Washington's two professional boxing shows are as disposed to do as much harm to each other tonight as the rival promoters, the spectators will get a deserved break.

Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty Athletic Club and Gabe Menendez of Turner's Arena, friends of a bygone era, but sworn enemies today, both bid for patronage.

These counter attractions, the first here in years, are the result of a backtracking stand by the Boxing Commission, which has decided it no longer has the power to regulate fight dates.

Ahearn presents a middleweight attraction at Uline's Arena with Washington's Smuggy Hursey pitted against Sonny Horne, Valley Stream, N. Y., stylist, in the 10-round feature.

Menendez, operating as usual on Mondays, has rounded up another "all-star" card featuring three eight-rounders as his competitive counter punch at Turner's Arena. Bantamweights Jimmy Cooper and Billy Lima headline the card.

Both shows start at 8:45 p. m. There will be immediate seating in all sections.

Lima to Test Jimmy Cooper

There are three other eight-rounders on the Turner's Arena program tonight, but the Jimmy Cooper-Billy Lima clash is the one which will attract whatever fans show up.

Cooper, local bantamweight, has won six of his seven pro starts, and the other was a substantial drew with Puggy King.

Jimmy, only 19, has replaced Bee Bee Washington, Stonewall Jackson and even Ken Stribling as the idol of the W stree tarena customers. He's a classy looking kid with speed and a clever lefthand. Lima, according to records supplied by his manager, is quite a puncher, having chilled over half of his opponents down Miami and Havana way.

There's talk of a Cooper-Manuel Ortiz clash here this summer if Cooper can hurdle tonight's obstacle. Lima hasn't defeated anyone whose name means much, but his record of k. o.'s, nevertheless, stamps him as a rough customer.

Welterweight Stonewall Jackson, recovered from the pasting Johnny Williams gave him three weeks ago, is back with Leslie Harris of Baltimore. Harris was substituted yesterday for Jimmy Collins, who reportedly hurt his foot.

Red Gaddes, another flashy local bantie, gets a chance against Orlanto Fernandez of Tampa, in another eight. Gaddes is a "comer" and if he whips Fernandez he can demand a shot at Cooper, beat Fernandez here recently.

Artie Bethea, also of Washington, tees off against Randy Brown, veteran New York club fighter, in the fourth eight. Bethea is a sub for Bee Bee Washington who withdrew from the card Friday.

Horne-Hursey Rated Tossup

Middleweight Smuggy Hursey will be out to reccapture lost prestige and another payday against Sonny Horne at Uline Arena tonight.

It's the oft-told tale of a puncher, of sorts—that's Hursey—against a boxer, super de luxe, that's Horne.

Tonight's scheduled 10-rounder will probably produce the opponent for Middlewweight Champion Rocky GGraziano here April 5. Horne, who went the distance with the thumping Rocky two years ago, wants another shot at Graziano again, even if it's only a nontitle bout.

Hursey isn't looking that far ahead. He remembers he made a poor showing against Tommy Bell in his last trip out at the ball park in September.

He'll have to go some this evening to prove he rated all the nice things said and written about him last year wwhen he was the cream of the local crop.

Both are in fine shape. Hursey will come at 160, five pounds heavier than the weight he fought at last summer. His handlers believe the extra weight will help him and they claim he weakened himself when he dropped down to 153 for Bell last year.

Both have good records. Horne dropped only three fights—all by decisions—out of more than 20 bouts last year. He's a good journeyman middleweight who showed well against Aaron Perry at Griffith Stadium in 1946. Hursey lost only to Bell in 1947. The bout is a tossup.

In the semiwindup Al Wright, a hard-punching local middleweight, mixes it with Jerry Heminger of Toledo, for eight rounds or less.

Bobby Bell and Billy nk, lightweights, tangle in a six; Welterweights Miller Jones and Chink Thomas are down for a four and Featherweights Tony Longo and Mose Herald open the show with a four.

J. V. Brilliant
No Relief For St. John's Foes in '48-49

HERE'S A WARNING to St. John's 1948-49 football and basketball foes: The Cadets will be just as tough then as they are now.

They have come up with a crop of junior varsity athletes who, in their class, have matched everything the varsity boys done this season.

That's pretty good when you consider that the St. John's varsity footballers swept through an eight-game slate unbeaten. And the varsity basketers have won 18 out of 19 so far.

The jayvee footballers actually surpassed the showing of the older boys. They went through a nine-game course undefeated.

THE JUNIOR VARSITY cagers are just a stride under the record of the varsity. They have won 20 out of 22, and have averaged 42 points per game to 27 for their rivals.

A new group of all-around athletes to succeed Jack George, Tom Fannon and the rest is on the way up to next year's varsity. And they come in all sizes.

For example, there is 6 foot 3 inch Bill Mayr, end on the football team and the basketball team's best man on recovering recovering rebounds. And 6 foot 2 inch Bob McDonald, second leading scorer on the basketball team and one of the best distance swimmers in the District.

Leading scorer on the basketball team is Bobby McLindon, who is mere 5 feet 6 inches. Bobby has netted 156 points.

Jewish Center Unit Dedication Is Held

Harry H. Goldstein Cuts the Ribbon at Arlington Ceremony

The first unit in the $250,000 Arlington Jewish Center, at Lee blvd. and South Fenwick st. was dedicated in ceremonies yesterday afternoon.

Harry H. Goldstein, president of the center, cut a ribbon to symbolize the official opening.

He called the center a means of enriching Jewish life in the community and of meeting the increasing need for adequately trained religious educational and communal leadership.

"Before the destruction of great centers of Jewish learning overseas, we were able to look abroad for the leadership we needed," he said.

Principal speaker at the ceremony was Rabbi Abraham Karp, who represented the United Synagogue of America, the Jewish Theological Seminary and the Rabbinical Assembly.

Those present he said could celebrate the fact that erection of such a religious community center here is not forbidden or discouraged but permitted by American law and encouraged by the American atmosphere of religious freedom.

Reading from a Bible printed in 1547, Rabbi Ira Sud, spiritual leader of Arlington and Fairfax Jewry, called upon the group to "Converse with God as you converse with man that your conversation may lead you to inner conversion."

The new center is to be open for all Jewish activities and organizations in Arlington and Fairfax Counties. The vestry and superstructure dedicated yesterday were the first steps in a construction program that eventually will include a synagogue, classrooms, and recreational facilities.

Contest Trip

Girls Report On Sojourn In Bermuda

Gini McNaught and Audrey Hall, winners in the Miss Government Girl contest sponsored by The Washington Post, yesterday sent back rhapsodic account of how it feels to go to Bermuda.

The trip, part of the prize the girls won when they were chosen as models for the next sequence in the Mary Worth comic strip, was begun last Friday when Miss McNaught and Miss Hall flew out of Washington on a Colonial Airlines plane.

Now, the girls are "there"—and "having a corking good time" according to Audrey.

Report From Bermuda

Gini, who wired an account of the trip so far, said that the air journey was "wonderful."

"Although it was my first flight over the ocean," wired Gini, "I didn't mind one bit." The two girls arrived at Kindley Field in Bermuda to be met by Army photographers.

"We were made to feel like celebrities—flash bulbs and beautiful bouquets from the Trade Development Board and Reseration Bureau," said Gini.

"The wait at customs was nothing; then into cars which tickled me because the wheel was on the right, and the car kept to the left side of the road..

"We didn't see much on the ride into Hamilton, capital of Bermuda, as it was almost 10 p. m., but the town was fascinating, and even more so in daylight."

Gini and Audrey described the Bermudiana Hotel as "wonderful." "Everyone couldn't be nicer."

Sightseeing, Dancing

Audrey said the colors in Bermuda in daylight are "something out of a picture book—the water a fascinating shade of blue-green, and everything so bright."

Hamilton's Main Street reminded Gini of a quiet thoroughfare in Boston. They spent the morning having more pictures taken, and exploring the shops.

A Different 'Shylock'

Schwartz Acts Yiddish Version

By Richard L. Coe

NO CLASSICAL PLAY has given our comparatively enlightened day more trouble than Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice." The Elizabethean comedy of a Jew's revenge has become a thoroughly unpleasant play no matter how carefully adapted.

Yesterday afternoon and last night at the National the leading figure of the Yiddish stage, Maurice Schwartz, presented his company in "Shylock and His Daughter," a drama built around the situation which served not only Shakespeare, but many another dramatist and story-teller before him.

The case that Schwartz and Ari Ibn Zahav, the Hebrew novelist, have built for Shylock is a convincing one. In demanding his pound of flesh, we are told, the Jew sought revenge for the theft of his daughter, Jessica. Not only did she leave the Venetian Ghetto, but she renounced her faith and became a Christian. Apostasy to both a Jew and a Christian, in the Rome-ruled world of 1550, was the unforgivable sin.

So he sought his pound of flesh. Portia, now a secondary character, makes the stirring plea for mercy Shakespeare wrote for her and reminds the court that not one drop of blood may be spilled. And the Jewish community does all it can to keep Shylock from his demand, prophesying that "for generations Jews will not be able to free themselves of his horrible accusation." It is a facet the Bard left out and it is the pith of Schwartz's play.

It is a depressing world Schwartz and his collaborators have shown us. Their anger at the inquisitorial practices of the day, which led the leaders of Christianity to any extreme to gain converts, has an historical backing which do not concern Shakespeare. He was dealing, as we today have such difficulty in remembering, with characters and a story; "Shylock and His Daughter" attempts to give them a background and a reason.

The Schwartz company performs in Yiddish and while this reporter does not understand the language, their acting, abetted by a sufficient program guide, makes their version compelling. The Schwartz voice and commanding technique is impressive. Charlotte Goldstein, as the daughter, gave a strikingly beautiful performance and there was fine feeling in Dina Halpern's version of Portia.

After the opening performance, the star responded to his enthusiastic audience with a brief curtain speech.

HORACE HEIDT, who'll be leading his Musical Knights on the Capitol stage the week of March 11, promises a thorough talent search while he's here. Associate Frank Reeves is in town lining up entrants. Contact Harris via mail % WRC, Trans-Lux Bldg., stating your age, address, phone number and your particular skill. Those seeking auditions will be notified by card of when and where to appear. Those passing the prelims will get the chance to appear with Heidt on the Capitol stage; if they make good there, they'll be heard on his network program of March 14. Four acts will be used in that half-hour show and the winner will get $250 in cash, with the possibility of linking into the contestants Heidt's been picking up since November on his tour.

HAROLD JACKSON, the WINX jockey, will emcee an all-star bill including Count Basie and his band, Herbie Fields and his boys, the Bill Williams Quartet and Herb Jeffries, Wednesday midnight at the Howard. Proceeds of the show will go to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. But then, if you're a WINX listener, you probably will know all about this.

THOSE LADIES in special booths of theater lobbies about town are promoting American Brotherhood Week and are members of such organizations as B'nai B'rith, the Sodality Union, the Variety Club, the Service Guild of Washington and the Ladies of the Metropolitan Methodist Church.

UNA O'CONNOR is the rare treat in store for the Mayflower's luncheon this afternoon benefiting the Garfield Cancer clinic. The wry, dry, witty and wonderful Una opens tonight with Boris Karloff in "The Linden Tree" at the National, but she's generous with her time for a good cause. More on Una later in the week if we can track her down.

RECORD COLLECTORS have two stars to say hello to this week. Dorothy Shay, the Park Avenue Hillbilly who's brightening the Statler these nights, will autograph her albums tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 in the record department of Hecht's and Wednesday at 4 in the cozy Disc Shop, 1619 Connecticut avenue. Gladys Swarthout, who'll be singing in Constitution Hall Thursday night, will get here a day early to greet her album fans at Hecht's on Wednesday afternoon at 4:30.

Questions and Answers On New Federal Retirement Bill

Here are some key questions and answers on the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson retirement bill which may win final congressional approval this week:

Q. Do I compute my annuity on my average salary for my entire length of service, or the average pay of my five highest consecutive years in service?

A. The latter is true which is the same system now in use.

Q. I was retired January 1 after 42 years of service. However, for retirement purposes, I could count only 35 of those years. Will I be able to recompute my annuity based on 42 years under the bill?

A. You will not. However, your annuity will be raised by either 25 per cent or $300, whichever is smaller. But you may elect to continue to draw your present annuity and assign your wife to draw after your death, a half of your pension but not to exceed $600 a year for the remainder of her life.

Q. I'm now in retirement and I'd like to have my wife made my beneficiary to draw $50 a month after my death. How should I handle this matter?

A. When the bill becomes law, Civil Service will immediately send a statement to each of the 120,000 annuitants to explain their rights under the new law. You will get a form at that time which you can use to make your wife your beneficiary.

Q. In your stories on the retirement bill, you frequently have referred to "your earned annuity." How can anyone tell how much of an annuity he has "earned" at any point of service?

A. First, no employe with less than 5 years of civilian service can draw a pension under any conditions. Secondly, if you have 5 and less than 20 years and leave Government you will have the right to withdraw your retirement fund in a lump plus interest—again, no pension.

But at anytime after you have had 5 years of service, you can compute your "earned annuity" up to the minute by either of these two formulas:

1. If your average salary for 5 years is less than $5000; take 1 per cent of it, add $25, and multiply it by years of service. If your average salary for 5 years is more than $5000, take 1½ per cent, and multiply it by years of service. If you're a family man, it's important that you keep up to the minute on your earned annuity so you will know how much your wife and children would receive in benefits in event of your death.

Q. I'm 56 and I have 27 years of service. Can I retire under the bill on a reduced annuity?

A. Not unless you're laid off. The bill provides that any employe who is laid off after 25 or more years of service may be retired on an annuity to be reduced 3 per cent each year the employe is under 60. The bill also gives the employe the option to retire on an annuity reduced by the same formula at age 55 with 30 years of service. A number of older women plan to take advantage of this liberal provision. . . . . .

Q. When will the bill go into effect?

A. The first day of the second month following the month of approval, except for: (1) the increase in employe deductions from 5 to 6 per cent will become effective the first pay period after June 30; (2) the reduced interest rate from 4 to 3 per cent is effective as of January 1; (3) survivors benefits go into effect when the bill is signed into law, and (4) the provision for employes who are laid off after 25 years of service is retroactive to July 1, 1947.

EXAM NEWS: Civil Service next month will announce an exam for health program specialists in the United States Public Health Service. The jobs pay from $3397 to $7102 to start . . . The research psychologist exam will be given March 2 in the Civil Service examining rooms . . . Only 130 persons applied for the recent warehouse examiner test for Agriculture Department joms . . . A total of 152 parsons were rated eligible on the radio engineer exam. About the same number failed.

LABORER: Rating notices are being sent the 5400 people in this area who applied for recent exams for laborer jobs. Most of the jobs are in the building service of the Public Buildings Administration.

Only 265 were rated ineligible. For male laborer, 1156 were given eligible ratings of whom 604 were veterans. In the custodial laborer test, 2386 were rated qualified of whom 1621 were veterans. Veterans will be given the first opportunity for the jobs. In fact, veterans may still apply for the test. The jobs pay from $1680 to $1822 to start.

VETERANS: In December, 1947, a check shows that 44 out of every 100T Federal workers in this country are entitled to veterans' preference. Veterans now make up 776,815 of the 1,766,112 fulltime employes in this country. Eighty-eight per cent of the male employes of the Veterans Administration are veterans, the highest percentage of any agency. In Government are 87,724 women who hold veterans preference.

3-Year Cedars Doomed

Winchester, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Eight years' growth of cedar trees in Frederick County will soon be cut under the direction of VPI entomologists. Virginia law provides that the trees, which spread spores injurious to apples, must be cut, but the work was postponed during the war.

Brotherhood Pleas Quote Washington On Bigotry

D. C. Observance Of Special Week Opened by Speakers Of Three Faiths

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

". . . The Government of the United States, which gives to bigotry n osanction and to persecution no assistance . . ."

These words which George Washington addressed to a Hebrew congregation in Newport, R. I., shortly after his election to the Presidency, yesterday keynoted a meeting that launched locally American Brotherhood Week, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Principal speakers at the program in the Interior Department Auditorium were Attorney General Tom Clark, a Presbyterian; Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, a spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation; Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, pastor of the National Presbyterian Church, and the Right Rev. Msgr. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's Cathedral.

No Peace Without Them

"The world cannot have peace until it has brotherhood and understanding," Clark told the audience. He said such ideals must be rooted in religion, and that faith in God "made our Nation great and strong."

Dr. Elson, telling a grim story of witnessing the capture of Dachau concentration camp while in the Army chaplaincy, said:

"There we saw the ultimate in the converse of brotherhood. And from the diabolical infamy of this synthetic barbarism, mankind must be delivered once and for all."

"It is not enough that we should come here today to offer sentimental phrases or merely experience emotional elevations. It is a bitter and brittle world we have to deal with. We must become transmissive agents for the spirit of brotherhood, until the world has become converted and goodwill prevails everywhere.

"Asks Faith Be Reaffirmed

Monsignor Cartwright called for a reaffirmation of faith "in that God whom Jews, Catholics and Protestants adore." He said a great task faces Christians in bringing religion to "a sluggish, stupid, materialistic and pagan world."

Rabbi Gerstenfeld declared:

"It is in that faith 'that gives to bigotry no sanction and to persecution no assistance' that this land has become a home for a new brotherhood between Catholic and Protestant, between Christian and Jew, united with the spiritual sense of man's God-given rights."

Watson B. Miller, commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization and general chairman of the D. C. "American Brotherhood Week" committee, conducted the meeting. He mentioned that the inclement weather had kept the audience small but said the meeting would go on "even if we have to talk to each other." Only about 15 persons were on hand when the meeting started, and this number was increased to about 50 as the speeches began.

Other Participants

Among other participants were the Rev. James A. Caulfield, assistant pastor of Holy Name Catholic Parish, who gave the benediction; Judge Norris C. Bakke, and Harry J. Kirk, respective Protestant and Catholic co-chairmen of the Washington Roundtable, National Conference of Christians and Jews; Mrs. Verna Linzel, executive director of the Washington Roundtable, and the Rabbi Henry Segal, spiritual leader of B'Nai Israel Congregation, who gave the invocation. The United States Navy Band played under the direction of Lieut. Comdr. Charles Brendler.

Guidance Plan In Arlington Schools Urged

Expanded school lunch facilities and addition of a guidance program in the Arlington County school system were urged yesterday by two exploratory committees of the school board.

The groups will report at a public meeting Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Claude Swanson Junior High School, 5800 N. Washington blvd.

The committee on guidance recommended a $32,900 program for the coming year, for achievement tests, placement of students in grades, distribution of information on courses and vocational guidance for stdents leaving school.

A director of guidance with a clerical staff, and special teachers at each junior high and high school would handle the program.

The committee on cafeterias and school lunches urged full lunch programs in junior and senior high schools now having only limited facilities. Appointment of a supervisor to develop the program was recommended. The committee said repairs were needed in some cafeterias.

THE "MAYOR" MUSES—Jimmy Lake, often called the Mayor of Ninth, dreams of his street's future

Old Timers Find Ninth Street Grown Soft With the Years

By John London
Post Reporter

Washington's hardened artery has gone soft—comparatively.

If you have your doubts pound a beat with a cop along 9th st. Chances are you'll find only the conventional.

Such was the experience, anyway, of a reporter nosing around for weekend knavery, for Bowery lowliving and sex on the rampage. All he found fas color.

However, 9th st. from Pa. ave. to K st. nw. still has its lively moments, likem this scene at 6:30 p. m. the other night.

Several old timers, giving trouble a wide berth, hastily left the tap room. As they swung open the clouded-glass door, a swirl of smoke drifted out, fast dissipating on the nippy night air. A woman's shrill voice offended the ears.

Paratroopers Duck

She staggered up from the table, grabbed a chair, let fly. Three paratroopers ducked. The chair splintered innocently against a far wall.

Out on the street, a property owner and one of the many unofficial officials of The Street, explained:

"The bags are drifting down from New ork ave. Used to have their own camping grounds. Now they're clamping down up there. So they're drifting, see?

"That's bad for The Street. As bad as when they made 9th out of bounds for Waves and Wacs."

Inside the taproom, a water-eyed rummy stared into space; another ruefully contemplated dwindling contents of his schooner. A few vagabonding sightseers seated at tables gawk enraptured.

Cop Restores Peace

In walked a clean-cut, lanky blond cop, clad in uniform blue. His hands were in his great coat. Pvt. James Scherer of the First Precinct did not carry a night stick. He doesn't need one.

To Maisie: "Back where you came from, sister. Be a good girl now. And don't let me see you back on the street tonight."

Scherer wig?waged his head to the soldiers. They ambled out.

And peace again reigned on lower 9th st.

Nearby, Scherer found a derelect lying in a doorway. Finally awakened, he said "Me name's Pat O'Reilly. Ye remember me."

All the bum wanted was 60 days. He got out Sunday, after 45 days, he said. Scherer obliged. Soon the wagon carted off the man—assured of a home till the weather warms.

At Jimmy Lake's

At Jimmy Lake's place—Jimmy is unofficial mayor of the street—there is a fight. But its on television. Jimmy's regulars rolled with every punch.

"Like I was telling you," says Private Scherer, prowling his beat with a slow but springy gait. "On 9th st. it's quiet these days."

"All you get is a few juiced up soldiers, some old rummies and hustlers. But mostly on The Street they're well behaved today."

"Course you still get drifters, though," he conceded as he waived to one familiar face, helloed to another. "Like birds, they migrate. Down south from the northern States in the winter; up north from the south in the warm weather."

At No. 416, Bill and Dutch are settin' in their cardboard-partitioned stall, plastered with samplings of their tattoo art. Dutch pushes back his black hat, about 5-gallon size, props his cowboy boots on the table and admits "prices is up."

Hoola Girls Passe

"Get a buck, buck and a half for a needling now. Used to be 25, 50, 75 cents, anything you could get, depending on how hungry you were. Those two-piece jobs—you know, hoola girls that shimmy when you make a muscle—they're dead. It's all emblems and initials now."

"But then Skid Row's changed everywhere. Market st., Frisco; South State, Chi; Bowery, N. Y. Skid Row's on the skid everywhere."

Dutch has the change in the times figured out.

"People's getting educated, that's it. Refined, know what I mean? People's getting sense. They can't get away with that rough stuff anymore and they know it."

"I come here out of Texas with the circus—played all 48—back 25 years. And it was rough on 9th then, buddy. But today. Ah, it's soft like a cream puff."

"Tenderloin" Means Steak

Most of the boys on the street 20, 30 years or more agree things have tamed down. Some will go as far as Bob Rosenberg, owner of the buffet at 511 and a native, in saying:

"Washington's tendeloin? Don't talk tenderoin to me, unless you're asking for steak. Girls, they're up on 14th st. Smoke, that's up on 3d st.

Or the tavern manager who recalls the halcyon days during prohibition when he lost a Packard a week to revenue agents.

You could buy more drinks at a 9th st. curb stone then you can in a package store or tavern today. The street was loaded with crime and vice, then, but not today, he says.

Burlesque Toned Down

Captain Robert Pearce and Lt. David McCutcheon of the First Precinct confirm that The Street today is no more troublesome than an old woman trying to live down the tarnished name she may have deserved in her golden garter days.

Even burlesque no longer is burlesque. A repertorial gander at the Gayety revealed nary a bare bosom, much less a snapped G-string. "Literature" peddled during intermission would hardly shock a maiden aunt.

An upper 9th appeared shrouded in gloom, what with the A. B. C. Board's stilling of the taps of the New Western Lunch and Reno Food Shop, Inc.

By midnight most of the 50 cent cots were taken in the flophouse.

The mantle piece was crowded with empty bottles, a habit of the house.

A few men tossed fitfully but only one man stirred, stark naked, demanding the manager provide refills.

What with the price of whisky, the trend is to sweet wine, priced about 29 cents the pint. Moreover, it gives a longer sleep. Such devotees of the grape are known as "stinky petes."

By 1 a. m. the only person roaming are a pair of sailors, pitching down the street, half seas over. Also a guy and his girl, dallying at the curbstone—love come to bloom among the ash cans.

Two Perish, Four Escape As Ritchie House Burns

Gun Factory Fire Mystifies Officials; Howard Professor Loses Library

Two persons died and four others escaped early yesterday when fire destroyed their one-story home on Richie rd. in Richie, Md.

The dead were Rosa Mae Deadwyler, 20, and her brother, William Deadwyler, jr., 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Deadwyler, their 4-year-old granddaughter, Janet Estep, and Jeremiah Washington, a visitor, all escaped without injury.

In other fires here yesterday, an air conditioning unit was damaged at the Naval Gun Factory, and the bedroom and library of a Howard University professor were destroyed.

Marlboro, Md. volunteer firemen fought the Ritchie blaze two hours in a driving snowstorm. They said the fire, which apparently started from a living room stove about 5:45 a. m., even crumbled the concrete walls.

Marlboro Detective Wilson J. Purdy said the two bodies were found lying on top of each other near a window in one bedroom. He conjectured that young Deadwyler might have gone in his sister's bedroom to help her escape when both were overcome. The bodies were taken to Gasch's funeral home in Hyattsville.

Blaze Is Mystifying

Fire in the Gauge Building and Laboratory of the Naval Gun Factory, 11th and M sts. se., caused two alarms and a two-hour fight before it was put out about 5 a. m.

Firemen and Navy officials were mystified, not only by the cause of the blaze, but as to what was burning. Fire broke out in an air-conditioning unit. However, officials said the unit operates from freon which they said will not burn. Damage was still undetermined last night.

Spectators told of seeing a "glow like a Roman candle" rising up 30 feet into the snowstorm.

In another two-alarm fire, a second floor bedroom and several hundred books in an adjoining library were destroyed at 2:40 p. m. yesterday in the home of Dr. E. Clayton Terry, 61, 3217 11th st. nw.

In the two-story house, in addition to himself, he said, were his wife, Caroline; his son, E. Clayton Terry, jr., 28 State Department messenger; his daughter, Caroline, 20, Howard University senior, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Angeline Terry, 28. No one was injured, he said.

Both Dr. Terry and R. B. Handback, chief, Fourth Battalion, were unable to determine how the fire started. Most of the damage was concentrated in the bedroom, they said.

Dr. Terry, an associate professor of internal medicine at Howard University Medical School from 1917 to 1942, said that most of the books were part of a 2000-book collection of political and historical works. His medical books in his basement office were undamaged, he reported.

Myers Heads W. Va. Democratic Committee

Ah, Woe! Oh, Whoa! Foxed by Lollypop

Willie Davis, 34, was really moanin' low last night because he was outfoxed by a lollypop and snagged by a harness bull.

Davis, who until police caught up with him resided at the Whitelaw Hotel, is a reputed flim-flam artist. And as any flim-flammer can tell you, no reputable member of that clean would ever allow himself to be trapped by a lollypop (woman) or arrested by a motorcycle policeman.

But both happened to Davis. The woman is Miss Ethel King, 1020 8th st. nw. The motorcycle man is Pvt. R. G. Ricker of the Traffic Division.

Davis as sitting on top of the world Saturday when he met Miss King in a ten-cent store. He tried the time - honored pocketbook switch trick on Miss King. She was told of a pocketbook that Davis and two friends of his had found. It contained $2000, Davis told her. She could have a fourth of this sum if she posted some security, he said.

According to police, she posted $51 with Davis, but later yelled for help when she saw Ricker passing by on his motorcycle.

Arrested with Davis were Mary Barnes, 23, and Marie Davis, 40, both of 1553 9th st. nw. All were charged with grand larceny.

According to Detective Sergt. Reuben R. Nichols, one of the Police Department's experts on conmen, Davis was very sad.

"He just moaned about what all his friends would say. Only the lowest form of flim-flammer would allow himself to be outfoxed by a lollypop and snagged by a harness bull," he said.

Cops Bet—2 Prisoners

Pvt. Charles Pearson, of Montgomery County Police sub-station at Silver Spring, Md., won a bet in the fifth race at Hialeath Park, Fla., and nabbed the men he said handled it.

William G. Tillman, 20, of the Old Georgetown rd., Bethesda, Md., and Millard L. Broadhurst, 51, of 4701 West Virginia ave., Bethesda, were arrested by Pearson and charged with gaming. They were released on $1000 bond each for appearance in Bethesda Police Court March 29. Tilman had $137 when arrested and Broadhurst $819, police said.

Pearson reported he placed three or four bets with the men in the 7400 block of Wisconsin ave., Bethesda. His bet on "Saggy" paid $3.20.

Swarthmore Club to Dine

The Swarthmore Club of Washington will hold its first informal dinner in two years February 28 at 6:30 p. m. at the Sidwell Friends School, 3901 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Dr. Everett L. Hunt, dean of the college, and Dr. Arnold Dresden, professor of mathematics, will be guest speakers.

Air Cargo Doubled

Capital Airlines carried twice as much air cargo during January, 1948, as was carried in January, 1947, Guy M. Springer, manager of cargo sales for the airline, announced yesterday.

During January of this year, a total of 3,175,092 pounds of cargo was transported by the airline as compared to the 1,758,830 pounds handled in January, 1947.

Md. U. Building Waits On 3 Million U. S. Owes

The University of Maryland, to whom the Veterans Administration owes $3,474,000 in veteran student fees, has delayed its construction program because of insufficient funds.

Comptroller C. L. Benton said the proposed construction includes a $300,000 swimming pool, a $350,000 chapel and $800,000 stadium improvements.

The Board of Public Works told the university that it must show "cash in hand" before each improvement is started. Benton said the Government owes the university $1,164,000 for last year and $2,310,000 this year.

Benton will go to Richmond Tuesday to meet with the deputy administrator of the VA branch office to discuss payment.

Shows in Hospitals To Raise $25,000

A drive to raise $25,000 for Volunteer Community Shows will be discussed at a meeting of the Exchange Club today at 12:15 o'clock at the Willard Hotel.

Miss Gretchen Rickel, show director, will explain the purpose of the drive. The VCS is under the sponsorship of the District Recreation Department. Plans are to give 2500 shows this year in Army, Navy and Veterans hospitals and camps, and in local civilian hospitals.

Nurses' Class Formed

Applications for the March 15 class in the school of nursing at Alexandria Hospital, Alexandria, Va., are now being accepted. Scholarships covering the three-year course are available, hospital officials said yesterday.

Owners Seek FCC Permit To Sell WEAM

Seven Greater Washington business men, owners of Arlington County Radio Station WEAM, have asked the Federal Communications Commission for permission to sell the 10-month-old broadcasting company.

Howard Stanley, general manager, disclosed yesterday that the owners, incorporated as the Arlington-Fairfax Broadcasting Co., seek to sell the 1000-watt station to Harold and Meredith Thoms of Asheville, N. C., for about $67,500.

Stanley said the sales application was filed with FCC January 15 and that other prospective purchasers may file during a 90-day period following publication of a legal notice.

According to Stanley, Harold and Meredith Thomas Thoms own shares in six North and South Carolina stations and recently applied for a television permit in Waterbury, Conn.

Stanley said WEAM began operation on "too grand a scale" last April, with a number of high-priced artists. After cutting expenditures recently, he pointed out, the station is "just about breaking even."

If an application now before FCC to increase the station's power to 5000 watts on a full-time basis were approved, additional personnel, equipment, and a new site would be required and stockholders would be required to increase their investment, Stanley said.

The present owners, he said, decided to sell rather than continue operation under the proposed expansion.

Stockholders are J. Maynard Magruder, Arlington member of the House of Delegates; William Banks of Chevy Chase; Harold G. Hernly, Alexandria; George Wernar, Chevy Chase; Thomas J. Broyhill, Arlington; Samuel F. Roth, Washington, and Stanley.

700 Slot Machines Licensed in St. Marys

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—About 700 slot machines have been licensed here since they were approved in a referendum last December.

The referendum gave St. Marys County the right to impose a $50 license fee for each machine and collect a tax of 5 per cent on gross receipts. Sheriff Willard B. Long said today that officials have not yet found any illegal machines.

A number of slot machine operators got rid of the devices after the ordinance was approved, according to Aloysius F. King, secretary to the County Commissioners. He stated that county officials intend to enforce the law rigidly, but added no crackdown is contemplated in the immediate future.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Brother and Sister, Each Having Married Into Step-Parent Role, Find it Difficult; They Ask: What Are Main Rules of Success?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Being a stepmother or stepfather is one of the most difficult jobs going; and what do you think are the main rules of success? As it happens, both my brother and I married partners who have children by a previous marriage.

My brother has shouldered the job of bringing up three stepsons; and as he was the eldest in our family and helped bring us all up, he is used to children, but he believes in system and discipline. In this, he is more strict than his wife and I think she should meet him halfway, but she won't.

There are four boys now,—the stepsons, aged 12, 10 and 8, respectively; and his own son, 3—and he wants them to have a regular bedtime; but if they beg to stay up, she usually lets them. Also there are constant minor arguments as to whether they should clear up their toys after play, eat all the food they've helped themselves to, etc.

Sister Acquires Two Adolescents

MY STEPCHILDREN, a girl 14 and a boy 15, were adolescents when we first met, a year ago when I married their father. They had been living with relatives since their parents divorced three years previously; and their mother saw them rarely and showed almost no interest in them.

She is married again and hasn't wanted the children to live with her—I think (though I can't be sure) that her husband doesn't want them,—but from the minute we married and took the children, she has been in contact with them almost every week.

She comes to town for unexpected visits, wants all plans changed to suit her, calls long distance, etc., and during the year has had them stay with her on three separate occasions, all expenses paid by their father. The children return from these visits so emotionally strained that it takes weeks of normal living to bring them back to carefree spirits.

Jealous Mother Fly in Ointment

THE BOY was reluctant to make the last visit but the girl worries about her mother all the time, as she isn't happy in her second marriage and has told the children so. The girl says her mother cries at parting, keeps asking if they still love her, etc., and our family doctor tells me these visits are bad for the children and urges me to stop them.

However, my husband can't bring himself to this step. From what relatives have told me, the pattern of his life with her was giving in, letting her have her way. Being a stepmother, I am reluctant to take a stand about his children; but if I made an issue of it, I think he would do as I wish. How can I help, short of "laying down the law?"

Also we both would welcome suggestions on getting the children to help happily with household chores. We don't want to force them; but we feel there is something wrong in a middle-income family with no servant, if children sit around and have everything done for them. Please advise.

E. B.

Great Heart, Good Partner Necessary

DEAR E. B.: There are two prime requirements, each equally important, for success in the step-parent role.

First, one must be a big person in his (or her) own right. One must be emotionally mature, capable of dealing sympathetically with children as children (not in terms of degree of kinship); open of mind and heart in contributing affection, security and exemplary leadership to family relationship. Secondly, one must have a marriage partner equally mature.

Or to sum up the requirements in St. Paul's words, "Love is the fulfilling of the law." For a definition of love, "It is that state in which the satisfaction and security of another person becomes as significant to one as one's own satisfaction and security." Like the quality of mercy, "it is not strained . . . it blesseth him that gives and him that takes . . . it is an attribute to God himself."

About your brother and his wife: His martinet driving is intended to counteract her pampering (as he sees it); and her defensive indulgence is intended to ease the rub, on the children, of his perfectionist severity. In brief, they are at cross-purposes because each is letting anxiety rather than love dictate.

"Perfect love casteth out fear," and greater measure of more mature love is needed here. It will do everything to harmonize parental views and help the children; and without it, all 1-2-3 rules of behavior will fail.

Perfect Charity Foil to Jealousy

IN YOUR CASE, obviously the mother is distrait with dog-in-the-manger jealousy of you in relation to her children. And at their half-grown age, the best solution in terms of their welfare (i. e., your success as stepmother) is to bear her jittery onslaughts with perfect charity, offering no resistance.

Thus you will give them salvationary example of mature behavior in troubled waters, will indirectly lift their spirits by adding not an iota to their emotional tensions, and will be, in your tranquil strength and goodness, a truly maternal source of heart-healing when they straggle in with spirits exhausted by her hysterics.

About chores: the key to cooperation is leadership. The able leader in any group endeavor assigns duties, pitches into his own and signals the others to follow through on a time-schedule. So should parents do with children—ignoring grumbling, lending a hand in the first rounds if need be, and thankfully praising work well done.

Play Safe—Use Safety Matches if There Are Mice Around

With a pilot on every gas stove nowadays and only the oven to light with a match, it is wise to deal entirely with safety matches in the house. Then the housewife knows no busy mouse can cause a fire by nibbling at her sulphur matches. If the kitchen is not a modern one, naturally the sulphur matches are more convenient, but they should be kept in a tin box with a lid when not in use.

Leaders Plan Tour of Homes And Embassies

For the benefit of the Washington Home for Incurables, the seventh annual house and embassy tour will be held Saturday, April 10. Mrs. Angus Dun and Mrs. Harold Burton, as hostesses, served at the first meeting of the chairmen of houses.

The meeting took place at the bishop's house in the cathedral close. Details will be worked out for the forthcoming tour, which will include 10 private homes and embassies.

Those in charge of the various places on tour, who will attend the meeting today, are Mrs. Carl Andrew Spaatz, Mrs. Christian Herter, Mrs. Oliver McKee, jr., Mrs. H. Conger Pratt, Mrs. Wade Hampton Haislip, Mrs. James Spear Taylor, Mrs. Paul Nitze, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. David O. Karrick, Mrs. Paul S. Magnuson, general chairman of the tour committee, and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, president of the board of managers of the Home for Incurables.

Mrs. Burton and Mrs. Dun are serving as cochairman of the houses. Their main task is to see that each of the places is staffed with 22 persons who will be able to give out information on the interiors of the houses and embassies.

Ask Anne Your Questions On Homemaking

Is it correct to send baby birth announcements to friends who have presented gifts at a shower for the baby-to-be? If not, what should be done? B. R. Z.

The recipient of a birth announcement is under no obligation to respond with a gift for the infant. It would therefore be perfectly proper—in fact, the courteous thing to do—to send announcements of the baby's arrival to friends who attended showers for the mother-to-be.

Can you tell me the name and furnish directions for a furniture finishing process often employed lately to re-do old-fashioned furniture? The completed finish looks as though gray or white paint had been put on and then wiped off in hit-or-miss fashion. It has a "pickled" look, yet I'm not sure that this is what is known as a pickled finish. J. A. C.

I believe that you must be referring to a "pickled" or "limed" finish. Here is the way this is done on old furniture: First, all the old finish is completely removed with paint and varnish remover and sandpaper. The wood is then bleached, either with a commercial bleach or oxalic acid solution (1 ounce crystals to 1 pint hot water). Rinsing with water to which a little borax has been added follows to remove all the acid solution. The wood, when dry, is sandpapered smooth and all the dust is brushed from it. A coat of flat white paint is then applied and wiped off (against the grain) almost at once. After a day or two of drying, a thin coat of shellac or varnish is applied. When this dries, it is sanded lightly with fine-grained sandpaper. The final process is to apply liquid wax and buff the surface. Several applications of wax should be made, followed by buffing each time.

Can you give me some ideas for preparing simple but tasty canapes, etc.? I never seem to get beyond the potato chips, salted nuts and corn chips, and I would so love to have some new ideas. I rarely have much time to prepare fancy things since I work and would like suggestions about quickly prepared and easily served canapes. H. V. A.

Starting with your old friends, the potato chips, you might make a paste of Roquefort or soft cream cheese, season it with Worcestershire sauce and paprika, and spread it on the chips. Or you might sprinkle grated Parmesan cheese over them and run them in the oven to toast a few minutes before serving.

Clam canapes are tasty and easy to make. Drain the contents of 1 (7-oz.) can of minced clams. Combine them with 1 (3-oz.) package of soft cream cheese, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, a pinch of dry mustard, a little salt and 1 tablespoon or more of onion juice. Heap these ingredients on rounds of toast or crackers. Or serve in a bowl in the middle of a tray of potato chips. Guests then dip chips into the mixture, making their own canapes.

A hot canape that can be quickly made is the peanut butter and bacon type. Toast rounds of bread on one side, then spread the soft side with peanut butter and cover with very thin strips of bacon. Broil canapes until bacon is crisp.

Smoked salmon makes good, nippy canapes. One way of serving it is to cut the salmon in very thin slices, spread them with prepared mustard, and fasten them about one end of small pretzels. The mustard will hold the salmon in place.

These are only a few ideas. You'll find many more in almost any up-to-date cookbook.

I read recently in your column of someone having put "lacquer" on silver. Does this prevent tarnish? What sort of lacquer should be used and how is it applied? Could it be used on flat silver such as knives, forks, and spoons? How often should it be renewed? K.A.C.

A coat of lacquer will keep little-used pieces of decorative silver from tarnishing. However, it is not recommended for flat silver or other silver used regularly in serving food, as such use will make the lacquer come off. Water-white transparent metal laquer is the best kind to use on decorative silver and other metals. It is hard to find in stores now, however, and almost any kind of clear lacquer can be used. There is also a plastic preparation now recommended for this same purpose.

Before applying the lacquer, clean metal thoroughly, then wipe off surface with denatured alcohol. After this dries, apply the lacquer with a paint brush or spray. Relacquering is necessary only when the old lacquer finish has dulled. The old coat of lacquer can be removed with denatured alcohol.

Would you please tell me if there is a "Woman's Exchange" in Washington. Also, since I do not live in the District, would they accept any articles from me to be sold? What is their commission? J. P. C. McC.

There is a shop in Alexandria which sells clothing, costume jewelry, furniture, china, antiques on commission for their customers and will accept articles from out-of-town customers. On the clothing and costume jewelry they charge one third the sale price, and on the rest of the above-mentioned items there is a straight 20 per cent commission. They accept only freshly cleaned clothing and all of the articles must be in good repair. They do not buy anything outright, but give you a receipt for the article when it is brought or sent in and pay you for it when it is sold.

Baby's Mouth Is a Target For Everything

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is natural for a baby to put into his mouth almost anything he finds. He exhibits no particular discrimination about tastes and unless he dislikes the texture of a substance he tends to chew and swallow it, however nauseating it may seem to the parent.

Mrs. R. L. B. says her 15-month-old baby eats lint of all kinds. "She pulls it from blankets, sweaters and even from the rugs," she writes.

"She has two good meals a day consisting of a little meat, all kinds of vegetables, except beets and spinach; all kinds of fruit. She will not eat cereal so I give her at least a banana a day and about five graham crackers. She will eat eggs only in the form of custard or puddings. She takes the juice of an orange daily and some vitamin D.

"I still give her two bottles a day, one in the afternoon and the other at bedtime. She drinks her milk at other times. She averages 18 hours of sleep. Why should she crave lint?"

There is nothing obviously wrong with her diet, it is a very good one with the exception of orange juice. Three to four ounces of that. She doesn't crave lint, but probably likes the texture of it in her mouth.

It would seem that if you could change her behavior to thrusting her findings into a basket or box, instead of into her mouth, she would outgrow this habit.

Suppose you watch her closely and when she puts anything in her mouth, say pleasantly, "Bring that to Mother. Here, put it in the little box!" Hold out the box and encourage her to drop what is in her hand. Then thank her elaborately. Make her proud that she has followed your directions. Baby is so smart! That's the tack to take.

Change the covering of her bed from a blanket to a smooth comfort. Try a quilted, cotton jacket instead of a woolen sweater. This will avoid the temptation to pick lint until she has learned how to put what she finds in the handy receptacle.

There are some cravings for uneatable substances in which children indulge, which could indicate mineral lacks in the diet. But this baby has enough protein (these lints are protein) and a varied enough diet plus vitamins, so that this would not seem to be the motivating factor.

It's Ulysses for Emphasis

Television Inventor, U. A. Sanabria, and Wife Are Capital Newcomers

By Marie McNair

A COUPLE YOU'LL be meeting often in Washington from now on is Mr. and Mrs. U. A. Sanabria of Chicago.

President of the American Television Co., which has just opened offices in Washington, Mr. Sanabria looks far younger than his 41 years, has already accomplished more than most men of his age.

MRS. McNAIR

Dark and sleek haired, Mr. Sanabria is called Ulysses only by his pretty wife, Maria, when she wants to drive home a point. Otherwise he's just, "U. A."

One of the inventors of television, for diversion he sails his yacht Airbans—that's Sanabria spelled backwards—on Lake Michigan and from his summer home at Travers City in the State of Michigan. He writes popular music, too, and his "Song of the Lakes" seems to carry the rhythm of the seas.

"Inter-laced scanning," a process that eliminates heavy lines, is his brain child. "Ghost" eliminator, which effaces all shadows, is another. And in collaboration with Dr. Lee de Forest, inventor of the radio tube, Mr. Sanabria is now at work on producing television in color.

During the war the young inventor trained the Signal Corps recruits in radio and television, still has something like 4000 GIs under his instruction in Chicago.

Washington offices, under the management of Gen. Clayton Adams, are established in the old Richard Wilmer house on I st.

ADDRESS, PLEASE?

MRS. PETER DRURY, who has a wonderful Irish sense of humor and a brogue to go with it, is telling a story on herself. She recently reported to the police through her son, Paul, the loss of a valuable diamond ring. The authorities asked young Paul the routine questions such as value, size, and a description of the missing gem. They also wanted to know where Mrs. Drury was when she discovered her loss. "At St. Elizabeth's," her son replied.

Diplomatically, and to soften the blow to friends, the officer wrote as her address, "Congress Heights."

Truth is Mrs. Drury was at St. Elizabeth's but only to see an old friend whose financial affairs are in her care.

THESE MODERN MOTHERS!

One half hour after she had given birth to her first child, Mrs. Richard Tucker Ewing picked up the bedside tlephone at the hospital over in Switzerland, called her mother, Mrs. John Harrison Knapp in Washington. "It's a girl," she said, "and she's named for you."

The former Maitland Marshall is, needless to say pleased. Jacquelyn Knapp and Dick Ewing were married in Washington last April, left not soon after for his Foreign Service post in Bern.

WHAT—NO REINDEER!

Mrs. Thad Brown had most of the wives of the big Republican Senators in for a cup of tea the other afternoon.

Not political but of the clan were Mrs. George Thorpe and Mrs. Carl Lomen, wife of the "reindeer king," who were talking of the health of their old friend, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the noted explorer, currently a visitor in town.

It seems that some time ago, in the interest of science and health, Dr. Stefansson and a companion in Arctic adventures, volunteered to eat nothing but meat for one entire year. At first, when they were invited to banquets, an attendant accompanied them to make sure they wouldn't cheat. As the program became easier to follow, the shadow disappeared.

The complete results of the test, I have yet to learn. But this is a fact. That Dr. Stefansson's pal on this carnivorous spree, who was a diabetic with high blood pressure, too, can now report his blood pressure has dropped back to form.

The Ides of March—tragic day for a Roman Emperor, is a cause for celebration in Hungary.

It was the day 100 years ago next month that the ruling class set upon their oppressors, the Austrians, and the same moment that the younger generation, composed of great poets, artists and writers, started a revolution of their own in the interest of civil liberties.

The bloodless revolt was unsuccessful but paved the way for eventual freedom from the Hapsburgs.

On March 15 next, the Hungarian Minister and Mme. Vambery have planned an elaborate celebration in Washington, with engraved pasteboards already in the mail for an evening reception at Wardman Park, where they make their home.

There'll be a short program first—and the Minister begs his guests to be present at 8 o'clock—with Michael Szekely of the Metropolitan Opera to sing Hungarian folk songs, and a noted pianist to perform.

Hungarian wines and a very excellent peach brandy are on the way, timed to reach Washington for the occasion.

Capt., Mrs. Watson Give Farewell for Col., Mrs. Bryte

Mrs. William H. Watson, wife of Captain Watson, USN, celebrated Washington's birthday and her own yesterday. Last evening, she and Captain Watson entertained at a buffet supper in the Shoreham's Pallidian room as a farewell to Col. and Mrs. Walter Bryte, soon to leave Washington for New York and thence to Germany.

In the company were Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Lewis Brereton, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Laurence Kuter, Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg, Mr. and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, Mrs. Peter Ansberry, without her husband, who is out of town, and Capt. Lawrence Latta.

Eylers Have Son

Mr. and Mrs. John Dechert Eyler, jr., are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, John Dechert Eyler, 3d, on February 3 at the new Georgetown University Hospital.

Mrs. Eyler before her marriage was Miss Mary Windsor Burklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Reyburn Burklin of Chevy Chase, Md.

MRS. EXARHAKIS
. . . wears ivory satin

Miss Evantahia Karazikas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pericles Karazikas, and Thomas N. Exarhakis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Exarhakis of Allenhurst, N. J., were married yesterday in St. Sophia's Greek Orthodox Church, with the Rev. A. Laloussis reading the ceremony at 5 p. m.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin gown made with V-neck and full sleeves, and a full skirt ending in a train. Her finger-tip veil of tulle fell from a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white camellias centered with a white orchid and stephanotis.

The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Miss Eleni Karazikas, who wore an ice-blue taffeta gown and carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses. Miss Ann Costakis and Miss Florence Exarhakis, sister of the bridegroom, were other attendants in ice-blue taffeta gowns. They carried white roses.

Nicholas Spirocostas of New York served as best man and the ushers were Marcos Karazikas, brother of the bride, and Peter Gacos of Jersey City, N. J. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Exarhakis left for the Pocono Mountains on their honeymoon and upon their return will live in Washington. The bridegroom is a graduate of the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University.

Main—Roy

Miss Mary Kathleen Roy and Markell A. Main were married February 14 at 11 a. m. in Fort Lincoln Chapel. The Rev. Francis X. Lannon of St. Michael's Church officiated, and a reception followed at Meadowbrook Saddle Club in Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Main is the daughter of Mrs. J. H. Melia of Silver Spring, Md., and the late George Sidney Roy. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar C. Main of Rockville, Md.

Given in marriage by her brother, Joseph G. Roy, the bride wore a soft aqua wool suit with winter white hat trimmed in gold flowers. She carried a bouquet of white roses centered with purple orchids.

Miss Jean Ann Redmiles, maid of honor, wore a pink wool suit, similar to the bride's, with pink hat and carried yellow roses tied with blue bow. Claude Stup served as best man.

The bride attended the Academy of the Holy Name and is now with the National Geographic Society. The bridegroom was graduated from Rockville High School.

After a honeymoon in the Poconos, the couple will make their home at 813 Carroll ave., Takoma Park.

Popular Bride-Elect Feted At Another in Series of Parties

Party No. 55 was scratched off Miss Anita Cajigas' calendar yesterday following the cocktail party in her honor given by Mrs. William Pope Anderson 3d.

Yesterday the bridegroom, Flying Officer George Mattusch of the Royal Canadian Flying Corps, was sharing honors with his pretty bride-to-be who'll become Mrs. Mattusch on Saturday, the ceremony to take place at the Church of the Epiphany with a reception following at the Statler Hotel.

They were a handsome young couple yesterday, both well above average height, standing with Mrs. Anderson to greet the guests. Anita, in black lace, had pinned a cluster of fragrant freesia atop her dark hair, and Mrs. Anderson wore a long gown of shell pink crepe with an orchid corsage.

From the bar in one room to the buffet in another, migrant groups made a merry passage.

Cabinet Represented

The Attorney General, Tom Clark, and Mrs. Clark in sleek black satin, held court in the drawing room. Admiral Louis Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, and Mrs. Denfeld, were surrounded by friends in the dining room. Gen. Wade Haislip and Mrs. Haislip with a halo of claret-colored feathers topping her slate blue satin gown, made their way with difficulty. There were Gen. Anthony (Nuts) McAuliffe, and Mrs. McAuliffe in brown satin staying on like many others to enjoy this pleasant party, and Senator Arthur Capper being nice to the ladies.

Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg was there in civilian clothes, so was Admiral James H. Foskett, former President's aide, who is down from Philadelphia for a fortnight's leave with Mrs. Foskett before leaving for his Mediterranean command.

Met Mrs. Clark Woodward, who left the Admiral at home and found her in the pink after two months of "heaven" in St. Petersburg, Fla.

It was good to see blonde and lovely Miss Carolee Arnold, here for a visit from Northwestern University, where she is collecting all sorts of honors. A member of the debating team at the university, she's also been entered in the contest for "Campus Queen."

Mrs. Ellen Woodward and Dr. Tomas Cajigas, father of the bride-to-be, were enjoying a joke, and Mrs. Cajigas, wearing a black chiffon gown splashed with red roses, was busy offering turkey and ham sandwiches to some of her favorite friends.

Mrs. Irene Caldwell, who stood near the doorway, had almost everyone coming up to her during the course of the afternoon, and getting around to say hello after a visit to Miami, were the former Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla.

War Hero a Guest

Rows of ribbons decorated the tunic of Capt. Don Gentili, who has 33 downed planes to his credit, a war record a yard long, and is now stationed at the Pentagon. Also there were Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran Ambassador; Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Paul King with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Pierre Gabriel; Miss Laura Belle Wyatt, squired by B. R. Curson, who's over from England as observer at U.N., and with them Lara Belle's sister, Jane, who's here for the weekend from New York.

Miss Mary Margaret de Burr just arrived from New Mexico where she's a student at the university, will be here for the wedding in which she will be bridesmaid. Others there were Miss Louise McNutt, daughter of the former Ambassador to the Philippines and Mrs. Paul McNutt, with red ostrich bowing on her red velvet hat; Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Beekman, James Souby and Mrs. Souby wearing a becoming blue satin and feathered hat; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Saugstad.

Then there were Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Boas, Mrs. Lee Brite, Mr. and Mrs. James Haley, Mrs. Edward Tamm and her small daughter, Grace who will be Anita Cajigas' flower girl.

Today Mrs. Clark Woodward will give a tea for Anita, and on Saturday Mrs. Ellen Woodward and Mrs. Albert Y. Woodward entertained for this popular bride-to-be.

Among their guests were Mrs. Harry T. Andrews, wife of the South African Minister; Mme. Thors, wife of the Minister of Iceland; Mrs. Clark Woodward, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. W. P. Anderson, 3, Miss Louise McNutt, Mrs. Robert Freer, Miss Alice Freer, Miss Beatrice Moore, Miss Virginia Lee Stallings, Mrs. James MacPherson, Mrs. Norman Keith, Mrs. Lorton Sims, Mrs. Frank Rogers, Miss Mary Margaret de Burr, Miss Carolee Arnold, Mrs. Cajigas, mother of the bride-elect; Mrs. Paul Dougherty, Mrs. Hamilton Dutcher and Mrs. Hamilton Dutcher, jr.

Near Washington Golf and Country Club

In desirable Golf Club Manor, on approximately ⅔ acre. This beautiful home of brick and solid stone construction presents one of the finest estates in the country club area. A 10-ft. center hall leads to the spacious living room, 20x22, that opens upon a delightful screened porch 12x20. The large wood-burning fireplace in the living room is most attractively designed, quite in keeping with the attention to detail that distinguishes this lovely home. French doors at the right of the center hall lead to the spacious dining room, 15x20, which is offset by a charming bay window and an intriguing breakfast room that has an entrance to the bright, roomy kitchen. A powder room and open rear porch complete the first floor. The beautiful open stairway leads to a delightful upstairs sitting room and 3 unusually large bedrooms, 2 others about 15 ft. square with adjoining tiled bath and a master bedroom 15x20 with its private bath, wood-burning fireplace and master's wardrobe, in addition to twin cedar lined closets. All rooms have excellent fenestration and view of the lovely Country Club Hills. There is a storage attic, also a full basement with maid's room and bath, wine cellar and an attached 2-car garage. The heat is oil, vapor. Rarely does one have an opportunity to obtain a home of this quality. Priced at $50,000.

Footnotes to a Morning Man's Sense of Humor

Perhaps this item will help Bill Herson's WRC listeners to understand him better.

Some time ago the station's director of programs, George Y. Wheeler, was shooting the breeze with some of the hired hands. He happened to mention an ingenious new clock he'd just bought.

This new clock did all sorts of things for George. It even turned on his radio at precisely nine seconds after 7:45 every morning.

"How come nine seconds after?" asked Herson.

"We set it for 7:45," explained Wheeler, "and it takes nine seconds to warm up."

Wheeler failed to note the demoniac gleam which had been kindled in Herson's eye. So he was wholly unprepared for what happened the next morning.

Promptly at nine seconds after 7:45, the Wheeler bedroom echoed to a booming voice which commanded:

"Hey, Wheeler—get up. Come on—roll out of that sack."

Mrs. Wheeler sat bolt upright. "What was that, George?"

"Yeah," echoed the sleepy George, "what was that?"

"Wheeler, will you PLEASE get up?" continued the voice.

Understanding dawned slowly on the Wheeler faces. They looked at the radio, then at each other, and laughed.

But that's not the reason this item is appearing here. After all, it is contended in some quarters that Herson has made other people laugh in his time—so that's not news.

I'm mentioning the incident only to explain to WRC morning listeners why they sometimes hear Bill Herson ordering an unidentified "George" to get out of bed.

DRAWKCAB TEERTS

Harry Gilbert of 2219 38th st. nw. writes:

"Everybody in Glover Park knows Tunlaw rd. But I wonder how many also know that it was once called Walnut lane because of its black walnut trees. And I also wonder how many stop to recall that Tunlaw is merely 'Walnut' spelled backwards."

BON VOYAGE, JACK

Unless he falls flat on his face between now and plane time, John F. Gerrity will take off for Europe this morning.

Jack is nation editor of Pathfinder Magazine. He's going overseas for several months on an inspection trip.

As you know, regulations provide that overseas passengers must be inoculated against everything from typhus to communism. Long before passports are in order, the doctors start giving the traveler a long series of "shots." This usually takes weeks.

But not with Jack Gerrity. Three days ago he finally got around to getting his shots. He marched in, rolled up his sleeves, and snapped: "Okay, do your worst."

They gave him the first injections in the series, and told him to come back next week for more. Gerrity shook his head.

"I can't . . . I'll be overseas next week. Give me next week's shots now."

This caused great consternation, but in the end Gerrity had his way. They gave him the works, and he's ready to leave. A bit unsteady—but ready.

"Both arms," he muses sadly, "feel like well-played dart boards."

MISCELLANY

Talk about names: The speaker at last Wednesday's meeting of the Capital City Cocker Club was Dr. Seymour Wolf—who was formerly veterinarian of the Coast Guard's Canine Division . . . Tom Bell of TWA is accepting congratulations following receipt of a citation for merit from the mayor of Wheeling, W. Va. Tom got a fancy scroll attesting to his appointment as "Honorary Rat Catcher." . . . Children's Hospital says "thanks for all the Christmas cards — we have more than enough now" . . . Attention Granite Staters: The University of New Hampshire Alumni Club and the New Hampshire State Society invite you to attend a dance to be held at the Hotel 2400 (February 28, 9 p. m., tickets at the door, $1.25) . . . Wonder why bad weather always cuts down my mail . . . Mrs. Herman Hutman of 5429 Connecticut ave. nw. reports that drug store Pepsi-Cola dispensers are now being wired for sound. When the clerk pulls the lever to fix your drink, you hear the familiar strains of "Pepsi-Cola Hits the Spot" . . . In asking hepcats for an explanation of the popularity of "Ballerina," I suggested that wholly normal readers wouldn't qualify for the discussion. M. O. Coleman pins my ears back with: "What makes you think your column is read by anybody who is wholly normal?"

SHE'LL LEAVE US EM TEE HANDED

Poet Em Tee indicates that she's not too happy about our having revealed her identity. She writes:

Now that folks know
Who wrote that rhyme
I think I'll go
To another clime.

Or maybe I
Should don a shield;
No telling what
Such verse might yield.

QUESTION

The compositor who makes up this page wants to know why I can't get some short items, no longer than this one.

Leonard Lyons . . .

[Leonard Lyons is away. His guest columnist today is the author of "The Hucksters" and "The Saxon Charm," Frederic Wakeman.]

SKIMMERS of guest columns are usually victims of two phonies, that: 1. The guest writer is a lifetime pal of the regular columnist, and is lending a helping hand out of sympathy for the poor fellow because he is: 2, Suffering from fatigue and must take a vacation in a hot climate under strict medical orders.

The truth is, I wouldn't know Leonard Lyons if I saw him at a Lions Club luncheon wearing a Leonard Lyons button. Once I was in a night club with a Hollywood agent, who jabbed me and said, "There's Lenny Lyons at the bar. Like to meet him?" He expected me to say no, but I said yes, and he said, "So would I."

But, I have spent five months studying conditions in Europe and I am therefore something of an expert on European affairs and I feel it my patriotic duty to inform the American taxpayer on a thing or two that so far neither of the Henries, Luce or Wallace, has dared to print.

Take general conditions. In England, despite or perhaps because of Austerity, they have Brussels sprouts. Also hoardings. Properly boiled, hoardings taste much better than sprouts. No one in England, especially dukes, can afford or even find servants, so the hit song is "Nanny Doesn't Live Here Any More." The upper classes are sore at the Government because the inheritance tax laws prevent them from shooting pheasants, so they have retaliated with this joke: An empty taxi pulled up in front of No. 10 Downing st. and Mr. Attlee got out.

I am a little mixed up about the Scandinavian countries, due to their custom of serving schnapps, but I seem to remember that Sweden, Denmark and Norway all claim Ibsen, Knudsen and Knute Rockne as native sons.

In France, I spent most of my time and all of my money as a sort of advance agent for the Marshall Plan, distributing American dollars on a fairly large scale in the Parisian bistros. The test convinced me that Europe will love the Marshall Plan, and even the Communists will go for it if you leave a generous tip on your way out. (Please ponder those last four words.)

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Democrats May Disavow Truman

By Drew Pearson

Henry Wallace's thumping victory in The Bronx, hitherto a sure-shot stronghold of the Democratic Party, has put a cold and clammy hand on the November hopes of Democratic leaders.

Wallace

Also, it has brought to the boiling point all the inner-Democratic bitterness against one Harry Truman, and for the first time caused certain Democratic leaders to decide that it was about time to look round for another 1948 candidate.

Hitherto, Democratic leaders have merely been content to complain under their breath about Truman. Even such stanch, true-blue leaders as Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky and former Speaker Sam Rayburn have been sour.

But now, with it quite apparent that Henry Wallace can steal votes even out from under the nose of that versatile veteran, Ed Flynn, long boss of the Bronx, the Democrats are beginning to figure that there's no use putting their money on a losing horse.

In other words, some of the realistic leaders are figuring that since they can't win with Truman, they had better get someone who can.

To disavow the leader of their party at a time when he's also President of the United States, to some Democrats is like preaching atheism in the presence of the Pope. Not only it isn't done, but it's risky. It means that you lose patronage plums, get in Dutch with other party leaders, are called an ingrate.

On the other hand, more courageous Democrats figure that it's better to get a new captain, even if it means mutiny, rather than continue allegiance to a captain who's hell-bent on running the party ship on a reef.

Backstage at Dinner

All of this was the subject of intense backstage discussion during the Jefferson Day dinner.

Helping to spark the discussion was a dynamite-laden column contributed by old curmudgeon Harold Ickes, pointing out something many people had forgotten—that it's the exception rather than the rule for Vice Presidents to be re-elected.

Out of six Vice Presidents who became Presidents of the United States, only two succeeded themselves—Calvin Coolidge and Teddy Roosevelt.

Four others were thrown out by their parties as unsuited to hold office further. Vice President John Tyler, who became President on the death of Henry Harrison, was discarded by the Democrats. Millard Fillmore, who entered the White House on the death of Zachary Taylor, proved to be a flop and was not renominated by the Whigs. Andrew Johnson, who succeeded Lincoln, was almost thrown out before the end of his term, while Chester Arthur, who took over after Garfield's assassination, was denied the Republican nomination to succeed himself.

In other words, American historical precedent has recognized the fact that the Vice President of the United States is usually a political accident and has treated him as such when it came to new nominations to the nonaccidental job of President.

Patchwork-Quilt Party

Other gossip going the rounds of Democratic leaders sounds like this:

"Let's be frank and admit that the present Democratic coalition is a patchwork quilt, kept together by hairpins and baling wire. But it has to stay together in order to win.

"In 1912 it won with Woodrow Wilson only because there was a a split between Taft and Teddy Roosevelt Bull Moosers. In 1916 Woodrow Wilson squeaked through again only by the skin of his teeth. Then the Democrats fell apart—the Al Smith Northerners vs. the McAdoo Southerners—until 1932.

"And in 1932 it took a major depression and an inept Republican to put a Democrat back in the White House, after which it took the strong personality and leadership of Franklin Roosevelt to keep us there.

"That strong personality is now gone. And we're going to have to get a new strong personality back at the helm if we are going to win in 1948."

Kaiser for President

One net result of these discussions is a move to run Henry Kaiser, the big West Coast shipbuilder, in the Democratic primaries in California, probably also in Oregon and Washington. Kaiser, an independent businessman who has fought the big monopolies, would be a new, fresh face on the political scene, and the American people are getting awfully tired of old political faces.

If Kaiser can take delegates away from Truman in the trial heats on the West Coast, then the myth about renominating the little man already in the White House will be pricked for good.

Father Seeks Dog That Bit Son, 2; Wants Test for Rabies

A Hyattsville, Md., father hopes that the man whose hound dog bit his 2-year-old boy at the entrance of a drug store in Kaywood Gardens, Mount Rainier, Md., Saturday, will make himself known and have the dog tested for rabies.

The child, Richard L. Cain, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Cain of 3900 Hamilton st., Hyattsville, was with his grandfather, John L. Cain, of 4300 Oglethorpe st., Hyattsville, when the incident occurred at about 10 a. m.

According to Cain, the child was bitten on the lower lip when he went up to pat the dog, described as a young "Dutch" hound, which was being led on a leash by a stocky, gray-haired man. Dog and owner disappeared as Richard's cuts were being washed at the Whelan Drug Store, 2209 Varnum st., Kaywood Gardens, the grandfather reported. Richard was treated and given an injection against rabies. Mount Rainier police were invetsigating yesterday.

Our calling

The most important part of all . . . The struggle we go through . . . Is that of finding out what we . . . Are best equipped to do . . . The calling that is ours in life . . . According to the way . . . That we can do the greatest good . . . For others every day . . . It matters not how smart we are . . . In terms of high degrees . . . Or how much time we give to thought . . . At universities . . . But only that we know what we . . . Are competent to give . . . To make it fair and easier . . . For other folks to live . . . And then to use our talents to . . . Accomplish what we start . . . And render every service with . . . Sincerity of heart.
